By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

British Columbia Indians will get back by Sept. 1 the first 100 acres of 36,000 acres of cut-off lands they lost more than 50 years ago.

Return of the 100 acres of vacant Crown land and establishment of a three-member committee to work out a settlement of the cut-off lands issue was part of an agreement signed Tuesday by Indian representatives and the provincial government.

Human Resources Minister Norm Levi, who announced the agreement to the legislature, said the return of the 100 acres will be "a symbolic gesture of good faith" by the government.

The provincial government alone will decide which of the 23 bands seeking return of cut-off lands will get the 100 acres, he said.

For their part, members of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs cut-off lands committee agreed to halt blockades and demonstrations related to the cut-off issue.

The three-member cut-off lands committee to be set up will report to the government by Dec. 31, 1976 with recommendations on settlement of the cut-off land question.

Members of the committee will be one provincial government representative, one Indian representative, and one person chosen by both.

The committee is to recommend to both parties more specific terms of reference for itself.

The government agreed to act on the recommendations on or before June 24, 1977, two years from the signing of the agreement.

The agreement states that "interim discussions will proceed in an orderly fashion and that the public and the operation of government will not be inconvenienced by demonstrations, blockades, or any other such actions."

Levi's statement to the house followed a morning meeting and a short afternoon meeting between a cabinet committee and about 30 Indian representatives.

The agreement was hailed on all sides as an important breakthrough in the struggle of B.C. native people to get the return of or compensation for lost land.

"We're hopeful that the agreement reached today will set a precedent for the settlement of the general land claims issue," said Chief Adam Eneas of Penticton, spokesman for the Indians cut-off committeee.

The bands have been seek-

SUPER WINNER

DUBLIN (AP) — The winner of the Irish Sweepstakes top prize of $460,000 was Edd Harrell of Detroit.

Two Vancouver Islanders were among the first tickets drawn on the race. They are "Bright Spot" of Victoria holding ticket QAL77303 on horse Derby Court, and "Miles Founnie" of Sooke, QHH59947, on Phoenix Hall.

The Superprize will be increased to about $1 million for the next draw in October, it was announced today.

The cost of a ticket for the draw also is being doubled to the equivalent of $4.80 from the present $2.40.

110 Die In Fiery Jet Crash

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Lightning is the suspected cause of the fiery crash of a Boeing 727 here Tuesday which killed 110 persons.

Fourteen survivors were in hospital.

Firemen said early today 108 bodies had been found in the marshy area at the edge of Kennedy International Airport where the Eastern Airlines non-stop flight from New Orleans crashed.

Two other persons died later in hospital.

A spokesman for the airline said there were 116 passengers and seven crew members, a total of 123 on the plane.

It was one of the worst airplane disasters in United States history.

George Van Epps, National Transportation Safety Board area supervisor, said there was no record of any emergency radio message from the pilot, Captain John Kleven of New York City.

Van Epps said flight and voice recorders had been recovered and were being sent to Washington for study.

Police, firemen and airport employees worked through the night to collect the remains of the victims. They stuffed fragments of bodies into bags and stored them in a yellow morgue tent to await identification.

HUGE HALIBUT

The fish, which dressed out at 324 pounds (with head and entrails removed) brought $302.29 to the crew of the longliner Cape Devon.

It was caught June 2 during a three-week trip by the Cape Devon and was part of a 35,000-pound cargo landed at the Canadian Fishing Co. plant.

"That's the first time in my 20 years of fishing that I've caught one that big," said Louis Smith, skipper of the Cape Devon.

Victoria Shipyard Gets Two Ferries

The Burrard-Yarrows Group has won a $6.1 million provincial government contract to build two ferries in Victoria, it was announced today.

The passenger ferries, to run between Vancouver and North Vancouver, are expected to be completed by March 15, 1976.

Victoria was selected as the site for construction because of the capacity of the yard's aluminum constructural component, Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said.

Earlier, consideration was given to have one ferry built in the company's Vancouver yard and the other one here.

Burrard-Yarrows was the lowest of three bids at $6.1 million.

Higher bids for the ferries' construction were $6.8 million by Riv-Tow with completion date of March 15, and $6.3 million with completion date of Aug. 15, 1976 by Vancouver Shipyards.

Lorimer also indicated the program for the Burrard Inlet ferry transit service is on schedule and should be under way in early 1976.

Tenders will be called for the construction of the first stage shore installations in late July.

The contract will provide jobs for about 120 men, Victoria manager D. W. Challinor said today.

He said the Victoria shipyard is employing just under 800 men now but about 120 would have had to be laid off at the end of August without the new contract.

"This will provide continuity for our work force and we are delighted," he said.

6 Cent Hike Not 5 Looming for Gas

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Motorists face a six — possibly seven — cent a gallon increase in the price of gasoline in mid-August in addition to the 10 cent increase going into effect this week, the chief spokesman for B.C. service station operators said today.

R. B. Baldwin, secretary-manager of the Automotive Retailers Association, said the five cent increase announced by Finance Minister John Turner for mid-August is a wholesale price, not a retail price.

British Columbia service stations can be expected to raise their prices by at least six cents and in some cases seven to maintain their profit margin of 23 per cent.

"The association does not set prices but we are making a strong recommendation to service stations that they raise their prices by at least six cents, not five cents. Service stations can not make any money if they just keep passing along cost increases," Baldwin said.

Gasoline currently sells about 70.9 cents a gallon in Victoria, with five cents more for premium.

The increase at mid-August will push the prevailing Victoria price to 76.9 cents.

British Columbia oil companies today issued statements saying they had no control over pricing policies of service stations, except for those few that are directly run by the companies.

They were responding to charges that some service stations may have raised their gasoline prices 10 cents a gallon prematurely.

The 10-cent-a-gallon tax is paid by oil companies on all gas they sell starting at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday. Therefore the 10 cent price hike should go into effect only when service stations take delivery of new supplies of gasoline on which they pay the oil companies the 10 cent levy.

A spokesman for Shell Canada in Vancouver said it has pointed out the regulation to service stations lessees but has no control over their pricing policies.

By normal schedules, all service stations should have taken new deliveries before week's end and the 10 cent increase will be general by the weekend.

A. W. Torrell, B.C. corporate manager of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., said the vast majority of Gulf service stations increased their prices 10 cents a gallon Tuesday because of the terms of the contract with the lessee service stations.

Torrell said Gulf had to pay the additional 10 cents immediately on all gas sold through company-owned stations and also on gas sold on consignment by leasing dealers.

"The question of new deliveries becomes irrelevant in the vast majority of cases," he said.

The gasoline remains the property of Gulf in the vast majority of services stations so the tax became payable the instant the gasoline went out the hose on Tuesday.

Hotel Blaze Inquest Told of Drinking Bout

A 45-year-old man in whose room Saturday's fatal fire at the Royal Olympic Hotel started said Tuesday night he had spent most of Friday drinking in cocktail lounges. (See also Page 18.)

Walter Stanley told a coroner's jury he had come to the city for a weekend holiday from a catering job in Resolute Bay, N.W.T., and began drinking about 11 a.m.

He could not recall how many drinks he had but agreed with Victoria City police Sgt. Gordon Bennett that he must have spent more than $100 during the 11½-hour drinking bout before returning to his room.

Stanley was the principal witness at an inquest into the deaths of Elizabeth Mae Towers, 20, of Trail, Lorna Anne Minnis, 57, of Vancouver and Charles James McDonald, 90, a hotel resident, opened before a six-man jury and Coroner Edmond St. Jorre.

Stanley said he woke up early Saturday morning to find his bed in flames above his head. He said he was not "thinking properly" at the time and couldn't remember if he had been smoking on the way up to his room or later in bed.

"I'm not in the habit of smoking in bed," he testified.

He explained to the jury he had tried to put out the fire with tumblers of water and failing that tried to carry a flaming pillow the sink but it fell apart on the way. He said he went into the hallway and told a man about the fire, then returned to his room, put on his pants and ran downstairs to tell the desk clerk who advised him the fire department had been called.

Stanley said he watched the fire for a short time and then tried to get a room at the nearby Salvation Army hostel. It was full so he spent the remaining hours of the night at the Johnson Street bridge.

Pathologist Dr. Garth Walther testified that both McDonald and Mrs. Minnis died of smoke inhalation while Mrs. Towers died of extensive burns.

The coroner dispensed with the usual viewing of the body in the case of Mrs. Towers and adjourned the inquest to July 3.

POUND PLUNGE RECORD

LONDON (AP) — The pound sterling plunged to a record low on the world's money markets today after a government warning that the entire British economy is in peril.

After shedding two cents against the U.S. dollar Tuesday, the pound slipped still further to $2.2500 from its opening $2.2525.

The pound has fallen 26.8 per cent against the currencies of 10 major trading partners since December, 1971.

Today's slide followed a warning from Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey that Britons must make "real sacrifices all round for a short period" to survive their country's worst economic crisis since the Second World War.

In a television address Tuesday night, Healey slammed labor unions, which are demanding pay raises of up to 30 per cent, and urged them to abandon "this mad paper chase for idiots." Unless they moderate their demands, he said, "we are all sunk."

Motorcyclist Gets $90,000

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

A B.C. Supreme Court jury awarded a 27-year-old former logging welder $90,000 general damages Tuesday for an accident he suffered almost three years ago.

Daniel Waldemar Kallstrom of Cobble Hill was injured Sept 2, 1972, when his motorcycle was struck by a car driven by Garnet Samuel White near the Red Lion Motor Inn. His broken right leg still hasn't healed and is in a cast.

He told Mr. Justice Victor Dryer and the jury in his civil damages action that he still has to use crutches and in 1974 alone made 44 visits to hospital as an out-patient for physiotherapy.

He used to work as a welder at B.C. Forest Products Cayeuse camp near Lake Cowichan but has been unable to work since the accident. He said his job is being held by the International Woodworkers of America union until he can return to work or until it is clear he cannot return.

He testified that he used to hunt, fish, swim, play baseball, softball and soccer and go horseback riding before the accident.

Too Early to Tell Effect on Hospital

The federal government's intention to trim financial aid for hospital construction may effect the B.C. Medical Centre in Vancouver but it is too soon to tell, a provinical spokesman said today.

Word of the cutback in health care spending, second such announcement in two days, came from Health Minister Marc Lalonde in Ottawa Monday night.

In a telegram to provincial health ministers, Lalonde said amounts allocated for hospital construction under the Health Resources Fund will be cut from $37 million to $24 million this fiscal year.

He also said the federal government will limit the number of foreign doctors immigrating to Canada unless a province requests that more be admitted to set up practice in that province.

Provincial Health Minister Dennis Cocke, on a tour of provincial hospitals, was not available for comment but Jim Mainguy, senior deputy health minister, said the implications of the new policy on B.C. have yet to be calculated.

The Health Resources Fund is used primarily to help fund construction of teaching facilities, said Mainguy, so any effect would likely be on the B.C. Medical Centre.

Lalonde's announcement and features of the Turner budget Monday are moves by Ottawa to counter rising costs in the health care field by cutting the share paid by the federal government.

CIDA Accused of Ignoring Women

By SHEILA BRADY
Special to the Times

MEXICO CITY — The Canadian International Development Agency's aid program has almost completely ignored women in its planning and implementation, states a research paper presented Tuesday at the International Women's Year tribune being held in Mexico City.

The research paper was written by eight women who have either worked with CIDA, CUSO or in Third World countries doing field work.

"It is our opinion that this oversight is a serious contributing factor to the many realistic and unsuccessful projects in our aid programs," states the conclusions of the four month task force.

The report urged the Canadian government and the Canadian delegates attending the United Nations International Women's Year conference to discuss with Third World countries constructive strategies which will enable women to develop lines of communication and co-operation for the success of future aid projects.

The task force study revealed that in 1973-1974 seven per cent of the projects in Non-Government Division of CIDA specifically mentioned women among the target groups of the aid programs.

And only 2.1 per cent of the CIDA NGO projected were aimed specifically at women during the same budget year.

The NGO branch is the smallest in CIDA. In 1975-1976 CIDA had an over-all budget of approximately $900 million, explained Hylda Bateman, liaison officer between the NGO branch and non-government organizations in Canada. Ms. Bateman is also in Mexico City as a representative on the Canadian delegation to the UN IWY two-week debate on the status of women.

Ms. Bateman said policies and the importance given to women in the NGO division are probably also similarly reflected in the multi-lateral and bi-lateral aid sections of CIDA.

"If anything, the NGO division is the trend setter in establishing new priorities when setting up requirements for loans and project priorities, she said during an interview Tuesday.

"This issue of funding training programs for men or women has not come up before," she said. "But I expect, because of the UN conference and the world plan of action, senior management will examine the programs again," Ms. Bateman added.

CIDA was in the middle of preparing a position paper for the UN conference but due to a lack of time, and no official approval from CIDA's president Paul Gerin-Lajoie, the paper will only be presented as a declaration of intent.

Lottery Revenue Dips for B.C.

Provincial government revenue from the Western Canada Lottery declined by almost one third in the second draw, Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said today.

He said in the first lottery draw, tickets sold made $1.5 million while expenses totalled only $843,127, leaving a profit of $683,587.

The second draw netted the province $485,000 after $937,000 was taken to cover expenses from ticket revenue totalling $1.4 million.

Government participation in the Western Canada Lottery is "the worst possible way to raise revenue" and the province should opt out of the event sponsored by the western provinces, Liberal leader David Anderson said today.

He claimed during debate of the provincial secretary's spending estimates that the lottery is a high-cost way of raising money and said he doesn't believe government should be involved in them at all.

In response, Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall refuted the criticism that the rate of expenses is not worthy of the profit received.

Anderson said figures proved that when the lottery was novel the province "made a fair chunk of money.

"But in the second lottery revenue went down and expenditures went up, indicating a trend that is less useful as time goes on."

LUCKY DIP

LONDON (Reuter) — An Iranian tourist is on police files as the victim of London's biggest pickpocket snatch on record.

In two seconds, the Iranian lost about $16,000 on the platform of London's Picadilly Circus subway station.

As a train roared in Monday evening, one man jostled the tourist while another dipped into a pocket containing about $4,600 in British currency and $11,400 in West German marks.

The Iranian—his name was not disclosed—and two friends fought with the thieves but were unable to stop them racing off with the cash.

"The crooks must have been astonished," said a police spokesman. "As a rule they collect only about $40 a time."

15,000 Jobs Facing Axe After Budget

Times News Services

TORONTO — Premier William Davis urged the federal government Tuesday to roll back gasoline price hikes in Canada, warning the "blatant tax grab" would mean the loss of 15,000 jobs in Ontario alone.

"Also it will damage our tourist industry and hit particularly hard at the auto industry and its more than 100,000 employees just as it begins to recover momentum," he said.

Davis charged that the new federal budget does little to expand energy supply, contains no help for mass transit or local governments and does almost nothing for the depressed housing industry.

"I am shocked by the smallness of the job-stimulating package," he told the legislature.

"It indicates we shall have to endure high levels of unemployment for many more months to come."

The premier urged Ottawa to withdraw a "discriminatory" gasoline excise tax of 10 cents a gallon, effective immediately, and extend a 45-day transition period for introducing a further hike.

"We do not believe any increase is necessary until after Labor Day, when we will be in a better position to set the appropriate date," he said.

However, two oil company presidents said today it was "beyond reason" and "would be money out of our pockets" to heed Davis's appeal to delay gasoline price increases when the domestic price of oil rises July 1.

Jerry McAfee, president of Gulf Canada, said any profit made by selling existing stock at the higher price goes towards buying new stock at higher price, "so there aren't any" inventory profits.

He said the companies would actually be out of pocket if they delay the price increase.

Pierre Nadeau, president of Petrofina Canada Ltd., said from Montreal that inventories last only 30 to 45 days and it would "be unreasonable" to expect companies to wait up to 90 days.

In Vancouver spokesmen for two recreational vehicle manufacturing companies said they do not expect the industry to be adversely affected by the gas price increase.

Lyle Bruck, general manager of Okanagan Manufacturers Ltd. of Penticton said he does not "see the new gas price affecting sales too much."

"Instead, people are going to travel less and conserve gasoline that way," he said. "Weekends and holidays are pretty much sacrosanct for Canadians and they will save gas during the week so they can get away on the weekend."

George McDonald, sales manager of Husky Camper Manufacturing Co. Ltd., said "I don't think the lift in the price of gas will affect us unduly."

SHERBROOKE WOMAN HELD FOR RANSOM

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Police said today a woman from a prominent Sherbrooke area family has been kidnapped and is being held hostage for a $1,000,000 ransom.

Quebec Provincial Police said the kidnappers have warned that if the victim's name is made public she would be killed immediately.

They said the kidnapping took place Tuesday. They did not know how many kidnappers were involved.

work amount to a gross of $37,000, court was told.

Dr. J. J. Gow, representing Kallstrom, said his client has had six operations since the accident and if the bones don't join other operations will be needed.

Even if the bones do join, it will be a year before he can return to work.

Jim Carfra, representing White, admitted his client was responsible for the accident, that he was negligent and that as a result Kallstrom had suffered injuries.

He urged the jury not to be "carried away" and said the bulk of evidence indicates Kallstrom may recover in a year, possibly longer.

From the general damages award will be subtracted at least $5,200 already paid to Kallstrom by insurance.

ing return of the land, or if it has been sold or built upon, then compensation for loss of it.

The general land claims issue is the claim of all B.C. Indians to compensation for loss of the whole province to white settlement.

In welcoming Tuesday's agreement, Opposition Leader Bill Bennett said he hoped it could be a forerunner to a general land claims settlement.

Liberal leader David Anderson also welcomed the agreement to settle "this injustice which has continued over half a century."

The federal government will take no part in the talks to settle the cut-off land issue.

"Federal government involvement, as agreed to by the minister of Indian affairs and northern development for any resolution of the cut-off lands question, is confined to 50 per cent of the cost of any settlement and is directly with the provincial government," Levi said.

"It should be remembered that the federal government have been the recipients of 50 per cent of the revenue that has accrued as a result of the sale of cut-off lands," he said.

Keeping Ottawa out of direct talks was a provincial government demand. The Indians cut-off lands committee had proposed earlier this year that a three-level commission, with federal, provincial and Indian members, be set up.

Eneas said his committee will recommend that the 23 bands cease further action related to the cut-off land issue.

However, he added that "this agreement has nothing to do with rejection of federal funding."

Indian occupation of department of Indian affairs offices in Nanaimo, Kamloops, Williams Lake and Bella Coola has been related to rejection of federal funds, not cut-off lands.

Tuesday's agreement on settling the cut-off lands issue comes a year after 750 Indians marched on the legislature to protest a century of injustice at the hands of the white man.

Many other demonstrations and delegations followed, culminating in Levi's announcement May 8 that the first formal talks between his government and native Indians on cut-off lands would be held in late June.

The agreement on cut-off lands does not mean the provincial government will be willing to participate in settlement of the general land claim.

The NDP government has said that because Indians are a federal responsibility under the British North America Act, a general land claims settlement must be between Ottawa and the Indians.

The Indians and federal government say the provincial government, having control of all B.C. land and natural resources, must participate in the settlement.

A general land claims settlement is expected to be much more costly than the cut-offs settlement.

Indian Act Repeal Set

The Indian Advisory Act will be repealed during the fall sitting of the legislature because Indian groups are not in favor of it, provinical secretary Ernie Hall said Tuesday.

He told the legislature that the act, passed in 1957, established a committee to advise his department on all matters pertaining to Indian affairs.

Frank Howard, former MP hired by the province last year as special Indian Affairs consultant, said today the committee established under the act had proved of no value and had been inactive for years.

Repeal of the act does not effect his position, he said. He has been working on the Indian land claims question.

Given Eye

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said Tuesday the government is re-evaluating the role of its agent-general in London.

He said a successor to the current agent-general, Rear Admiral Michael Stirling, who retires at the end of the month, will be appointed.

Marguerite Already At Break-Even Point

The provincial government is breaking even on the Princess Marguerite operations and should report a profit during the peak tourist season, Resources Minister Bob Williams told the legislature Tuesday.

"Operating revenue equals operating expenditures, a good situation, seeing we haven't yet reached the peak season," said Williams.

Enabling legislation for the Seattle-Victoria ferry operation — which also gives Williams power to set up Crown corporations and develop Crown land without legislative approval — was passed, despite opposition attempts to water down the bill.

Several opposition MLAs introduced amendments to the bill, and although Williams promised to consider proposals from Tory leader Scott Wallace, the changes were not formally accepted.

Wallace suggested a provision which would have held the minister accountable for funds borrowed up to $250,000 without the consent of the cabinet and $10 million without the consent of the legislature.

Williams promised to study the suggestions while the house is adjourned for the summer.

During section by section debate of the bill — which now needs only royal assent to become law — Williams admitted $39,000 was spent by the lands department to finance start-up costs of the Marguerite.

Questioned by Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson, who earlier charged expenditures were illegal because they were not included in spending estimates passed by the legislature, Williams said revenue generated by first few runs of the vessel were used to pay back the lands account.

Current expenses, the minister said, are being financed by revenue from the ferry runs.

Williams said the provincial government found it necessary to bring in the new legislation rather than use existing provisions because of intended developments of the Inner Harbor and Whistler Mountain.

The opposition has claimed that existing statutes including the Railway Act and Transit Services Act give Williams enough scope to operate the Marguerite and develop Crown land.

WILLIAMS

But Williams said the statutes are "not acceptable because additional flexibility is desirable" for Inner Harbor and Whistler.

Allan Williams (Ind. — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) asked if Williams' purpose is to set up companies to circumvent the rigid bureaucracy that has built up in the lands department.

But the minister replied, no.

A Once-Only Policy

Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer said Tuesday the provincial government has no intentions of habitually appointing aldermen to municipal councils.

Lorimer made the comment in response to opposition concerns that appointment of an alderman to the proposed municipal council of Whistler oculd become a precedent.

The exchange came during debate of the bill to give Whistler municipal status and financial assistance for services. The bill was later approved in principle.

Although the bill was praised by Independent MLA Allan Williams (West Vancouver-Howe Sound) Socred MLA Hugh Curtis (Saanich) said "appointment by the provincial government of one alderman may lead to other appointments on other councils."

He said it established a precedent that could be repeated and abused.

But Lorimer said he has "no intention of appointing aldermen in other areas, except in exceptional cases."

Sandwich Bar Probe

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said Tuesday he will launch a "careful investigation" into problems connected with a proposed sandwich bar at the former Esso gas station on the Inner Harbor.

In the legislature Hall agreed with Liberal leader David Anderson that jurisdiction over the property should be held by the Capital Improvement District Commission with the provincial government acting as the transfer agency.

The proposal was announced initially by Public Works Minister Bill Hartley

Hall admitted the provincial government has been using "big stick" tactics in dealing with problems of development in the Capital Regional District. It's just another example where the government made decisions to correct urgent situations, he said.

"We had to act. I think the relations (between Victoria city council and the provincial government) have probably reached the worst state."

During debate of his department's spending estimates Hall said it's now up to the province and the city to work together "and clean up this mess with a little co-ordination."

Protection Sought For All Roomers

Canadian Press

Opposition MLAs said Tuesday all residents of rental accommodation should be protected under the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act.

The members made their point during debate of a bill which would bring hotel and motel rooms being used for residential purposes under the provisions of the act.

However, the legislation would narrow such protection in these rooms to those receiving payments under the Social Assistance Act, the Guaranteed minimum Income Assistance Act, the Handicapped Persons Income assistance Act, the Workers' Compensation act or the War Veterans Act.

Bob McClelland (SC—Langley) said if the premises are residential they should be so designated whether for people on government support or not.

He said many landlords will not rent to people who qualify under the legislation because it would mean the rents would be fixed by the B.C. Rent Review Commission.

Conservative Leader Scott Wallace said the legislation discriminates against those renting hotel or motel rooms on a permanent basis who have worked hard all their lives and are not on government assistance.

He said the legislation should not apply to the financial status of the person using the accommodation but to the accommodation itself if it is being used on a permanent basis.

Allan Williams (Ind.—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said the government was just trying to make political capital out of those people receiving social assistance.

Don Phillips (SC—South Peace River) said that the government's policies on rent controls have resulted in a shortage of rental accommodation, foreing people into low-cost, deplorable rental units.

QUAIFE NOW SEEKS SOCRED NOMINATION

DUNCAN — Former mayor Jim Quaife will seek the Social Credit party nomination for the Cowichan-Malahat riding on Sept. 22 at Cowichan Senior Secondary School.

Quaife, mayor of Duncan from 1967 to 1973, ran as a Progressive Conservative candidate in the 1972 election, and recently quit the Tories.

The nomination also will be sought by Pat Rogers, president of Zone 1 of the B.C. Social Credit Party.

Rogers, who lives in North Cowichan, is a newspaper agent for Victoria Press Ltd., and was the Socred candidate in 1966 when he lost to then opposition leader Robert Strachan.

Salary Data Demanded

The provincial government was criticized by Liberal leader David Anderson Tuesday for failing to provide specific information on salaries paid to deputy and associate deputy ministers.

Asked in the legislature, Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said salaries are a matter of public record, but his statement was later contradicted by Anderson.

The Liberal leader said information on exact salaries is not being made available by the public service commission.

And cabinet orders-in-council which are made public, include only the salary range of $39,000 to $48,000, he said.

Wilderness Park Boost

The provincial government has expanded Cathedral Park in the Penticton area from 18,000 to 82,000 acres, Recreation Minister Jack Radford said Tuesday.

The large wilderness area addition includes scenic Wall-Creek Meadows and Haystack Lakes and will provide expanded camping and recreational room, Radford said.

Decision to add the acreage comes on the recommendation of the province's environment and land-use committee and was "not entered lightly."

The Secretariat report analysed the forest resources in the expansion area and determined that forest land was not of high quality and mineral potentials were generally low, he said.

A Step Forward for Justice

The announcement of a mechanism for settling the contentious Indian cut-off land claims in British Columbia will be welcomed by all B.C. residents, not just those with darker skins who were here first. The provincial government is to be commended for swallowing its pride and, in effect, recognizing the validity of the claims. This is a historic reversal of past provincial policy.

At the same time, the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs should be congratulated for its declaration of restraint, that there will be no blockades or demonstrations on the cut-off claims issue while the special three-member committee meets to recommend a solution to the claims by 23 separate Indian bands to some 36,000 acres trimmed away from their reserves six decades ago.

However, no one should assume that agitation by B.C. native people now will automatically cease. The agreement reached has nothing to do with the present blockade of the B.C. Railway right of way at Takla Lake, for example, or the blockade near Lillooet.

The cut-off land claims are only the tip of the iceberg of a whole collection of other grievances and claims by B.C. Indians. Just over 53 square miles are at stake — admittedly some of it very valuable real estate, in the middle of some Okanagan communities and in metropolitan Vancouver. But once the cut-off claims are settled by the mutually agreed-upon deadline of mid-1977, then most likely B.C. native people will move into high gear on other issues as well.

Fishing and hunting rights are among them, but probably the biggest is the question of aboriginal land claims, based on the historical fact that the Indians' presumed title to most of the land which now forms British Columbia, was never extinguished by the Hudson's Bay Co., colonial authorities or subsequent federal administrations. The Nishga Indians of north-central B.C. claim 6,000 square miles of the Nass River valley, a claim they carried all the way to the supreme court of Canada, where a split decision effectively handed the problem back to the politicians.

The provincial government's position is that only Ottawa has the constitutional authority to deal with this question, and successive federal ministers of Indian affairs maintain just as stoutly that B.C. must logically become involved as it has title to almost all the land at issue.

Sooner or later, this political buck-passing will have to stop. As the province slowly realized over almost three years its responsibility in the cut-off claims affair, so too it will be forced to come to grips with the other Indian claims as well. If it is lucky, the atmosphere of good will generated by this first small step forward (and by the New Democratic Party administration's liberal treatment of native people in other areas) should be useful in the horse trading with the federal authorities that lies ahead.

Ottawa Notes

News concerning our busy federal legislators, or, is this what we're paying them $32,000 a year for?

Hugh Anderson, Liberal MP for Comox-Alberni, advises in his latest newsletter to constituents: "What is the prime minister really like? Is he arrogant, cold and ruthless or is he warm and compassionate?"

Although no intimate friend of the PM's, Anderson states that Trudeau "is concerned about the quality of life in Canada, he realizes the pitfalls of the present economic situation, has a great deal of compassion toward his fellow man and is striving to better the life of the average Canadian citizen in difficult times."

There now, querulous quibblers and critics of the $200,000 prime ministerial swimming pool, Ottawa's year-long stand-pat economic policy, the government's decision to sell CANDU nuclear reactors to all comers, you're in good hands. The universe is unfolding as it should.

From the parliamentary other place, the red chamber of the senate, Hansard of June 17 records Senator Jacques Flynn on second reading of the bill to amend the Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation Act.

"... the bill is not simple, it is insignificant. I cannot really understand why the government decided to present this bill to parliament, because it does only two trivial things.

"First it changes the name of the corporation and, secondly, it changes the title of the principal officer of that corporation."

Now, what were the constitutional lawyers saying about the importance of the Canadian senate and its famous sober second look?

" . . . go ahead . . . disagree and I'll shove that newspaper down your throat . . . "

Roost for Homing Chickens

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner's latest budget is a response to the triple challenges of inflation, unemployment and the energy squeeze. At the same time it is a roost for the government's homing chickens.

Economics, as the minister observed in his opening reflections on the international monetary situation, is too important to be left to economists. The conclusion is also supported by much domestic experience. Again we have major budget re-calculations. Again with the caution that Turner's forecasts for 1975-76 are to be interpreted as "mid-points of ranges of estimates."

The view in November was that financial requirements for this year would be $3 billion. They are now calculated at $5.3 billion. Owing to a sluggish economy, tax collections will be lower by $1.7 billion than was anticipated. The deficit of the unemployment insurance account is up $800 million.

Oil export receipts will be down by $400 million. On the other side, Turner will profit by delayed recipts of $600 million in corporate tax instalments but will still be out $2.3 billion in his November sums.

Implausible Defence

In prospect now, with the various tax changes announced on Monday night, is a deficit on budgetary transaction of $3.2 billion plus a deficit of $2.1 billion on non-budgetary transactions. Allowing for a surplus on foreign exchange transactions, Turner will need to find slightly less than $5 billion. On the alternative national accounts method of reckoning, the deficit is $3.7 billion.

The changes with greatest dramatic impact are, obviously, the 10-cent-a-gallon excise levy on gasoline for personal use (which is likely to involve some monitoring problems) and the additional five-cents-a-gallon on a range of products resulting from the increased crude oil price. It cannot now be said that the government is engaged in a mere paper fight for conservation.

Even so, conservation was certainly not the government's primary motivation. Turner had to do something to close the famous and growing gap between payments required for the consumer cushion in Quebec and the Maritimes and slumping oil export tax revenues. In addition, the domestic supply problem dictates higher prices, including a phased movement to more realistic prices for natural gas.

Energy aside, the budget seems to be a much more neutralist document than the minister's language and argument frequently suggests. Turner, being engaged in a two-front war, will have difficulty in satisfying those who believe he should concentrate on inflation and, equally, in pleasing others who feel that unemployment is the greater menace.

What has come of the consensus exercise is a government decision to set an example. The hope is to cut planned spending by about $1 billion. This means, apparently, to limit the increase to about 13½ per cent instead of the originally targeted 15 per cent. In man-year terms, the public service will be permitted to rise only 3.1 instead of 4.1 per cent.

In the same spirit the government is at last to produce legislation curbing

. . . paints a bleak picture

some of the more notorious abuses of the over-generous unemployment insurance scheme. Even so, it will have to shift some of the burden of maintaining the plan from its own shoulders to those of employers and employees. Premiums will go up, with replacement of the four per cent benchmark by a new eight-year moving average of national unemployment rates. When government chickens come home to roost, it is the taxpayer who meets the bill.

Also at long last the government is moving to place ceilings on its yearly increases in contributions to the formerly open-ended hospital insurance and medicare schemes. In the case of medicare, the ceiling will be 13 per cent in 1976-77, declining to 8½ per cent in 1978-79 and subsequent years.

The personal income tax increase is of relatively minor proportions (from a revenue standpoint $50 millions) and will fall exclusively on persons earning in excess of $27,000 if married, roughly $25,000 if single.

But Turner does not wish to weaken the expansionary thrust in the economy. If the effect of the above measures are to draw out money, the effect of others is to pump it back into circulation. Business investment is to be supported with a temporary investment tax credit, at a cost to the treasury of $200 million. The commitment to CMHC is increased by $200 million; grants for privately financed housing by $150 million. Direct employment programs (LIP, occupational training, student summer jobs, etc.) will claim another $450 million over two years.

For the third time, the minister is seizing the nettle of resource taxation, in an effort to appease the producer provinces and to release development capital. In place of the 50 per cent resource rate and 15 point federal abatement, Turner now offers a 46 per cent rate and a new, more precisely aimed, resource allowance. The next effect will be to improve the position of those who explore and develop, partly at the expense of those who do not.

Neutralist Document

Estimated cost of the change to the treasury is $40 million.

Re-emphasizing the warnings of his recent speeches, Turner paints a very bleak picture of our accelerating wage costs and the threat posed to our competitive position, especially in the all-important markets of the United States. This sombre background casts a long shadow over his June budget. Given the now admitted failure of the consensus effort, are the various new measures adequate to the need.

One indication of the government's concern is the statement that ministers gave carefull consideration on this occasion to price and income controls in what it now concedes is a new situation. That is to say, the problem is no longer primarily the world but escalating domestic costs in an under-employed economy. It was deterred, apparently, by the old bureaucratic nightmares plus its own sense of inadequate public support.

The defence, however, becomes less and less plausible, especially as the government has done nothing whatever to encourage the "public conviction" it professes to require and almost everything in its power to squelch it.

Bilingual Labelling

During the past few years the concept of Canada as a bilingual country has been forced down the throats of Canadians like the proverbial lump of porridge.

It does become a little hard to take when in a time of inflation we are forced to pay even more because everything has to be labelled in French as well as English. There are businesses which contribute to our economy who are being forced to either pay much more for imported products or are not able to receive them at all, hence they suffer because of bill C-180 which deals with labelling of products.

English is the mother tongue of our country and if the French want to study in French fine, but English should be the common language for the whole country, including Quebec. Maybe it's a coincidence but the majority of our federal ministers have a very fine French accent and name. I wonder if this has anything to do with ramming French down the throats of all the English, Dutch, German, Chinese, Polish, etc., Canadians?

Could be that they are more concerned about the power of all those French votes in Quebec than with the unification of the Canadian people at a time when we have to pull together? — A. R. van de Mortel, 1506 Charlton Road.

Boardroom Bedlam

Bedlam reigned in the boardroom of B.C. industrialism recently. It was mainly because of the meaty questions, rather than the status-quo of the questioners.

Computers, scrambling the RSVP cards, invited a bookbinder, a pot-scrubber and a politician to the inner sanctum of a business giant. The board meeting went something like this:

The pot-scrubber asked the politician: "What's your line?" Socred, was the reply. "How does one get to be that?" pressed the pot-scrubber. "Be a parent in the Apple Valley PTA, and you're in," said the politician.

The chairman of the board, peering at the bookbinder, asked "Do you concur with that?" It's in the book, was the reply.

Again the pot-scrubber: "An eastern syndicate is spreading a $20,000 ad pitch in B.C. The ads seem bent on alarming ordinary people about owning their own resources. This same syndicate owns mines in South Africa; the white miners are paid $520 per month, while African counterparts, in the same period, earn $32. How come?"

"I'll answer that," chortled the politician. "Free enterprise." "And what do you make of that?" asked the chairman, of the bookbinder. "It's in the book," he replied.

"I'm puzzled," concluded the pot-scrubber. "If it's unwise to own your own resources, why would anyone spend $20,000 in B.C. alone, to say it's folly for people to develop their own heritage on their own?"

"Why? I'll tell you why," opined the politician. "If you can't convince people, scare hell out of them."

"Time for one last question," said the chairman, nodding to the bookbinder; but the answer came ahead of the question. "It's in the book."—Ernie R. Smith, 404-1830 Fern Street.

Travel Is Broadening

I should like to comment on the article by Allan Fotheringham in the Times June 21: Now Is Time for All Good Party Men to See the World.

Apart from being vicious I found that there were many inaccuracies wilful or otherwise such as:

Fotheringham states that Barrett was in Hawaii for the last federal budget but he forgets to say that Barrett was on his way home from his trade mission to Japan.

Fotheringham states that Barrett "on achieving power in 1972 had never been to Montreal let alone outside the country." This is a fatuous remark as Fotheringham should know that Barrett completed his education in St. Louis but possibly Fotheringham believes St. Louis is in Canada.

To insinuate that Alex Macdonald planned the dates of his trip to London just to coincide with Wimbledon is hitting below the belt as of course the attorney-general was accompanying the premier to the U.K. and surely even Fotheringham knows that Barrett and his party must fit in with the availability of persons who are to be interviewed in the interests of the province.

Surely Fotheringham does not feel that the trip of Health Minister Dennis

BARRETT IN CHINA
. . . should take more trips

Cocke to China with a contingent of doctors was ill-spent.

The inclusion of Emery Barnes in the contingent which went to China was in my view a very clever move to show the Chinese that as far as B.C. is concerned we do not discriminate on the basis of color, race or creed. I could continue indefinitely.

I am delighted to see our cabinet ministers see conditions in other countries, especially those with similar social targets as ourselves. I do not feel that we can learn anything social from the U.S. except selfishness and greed and I was therefore delighted to see that most of the visits were to countries with progressive social programs such as public housing. We have a great deal to learn from these countries and the only way this can be achieved is by contacts. —M. P. B. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

Barrett Beanery

I am writing concerning the article in the June 17 Times entitled Barrett's Beanery. I fully concur with Mr. Hood's reaction to the government's plan for a sandwich bar at the corner of the causeway and Wharf, and hope that others will support him in his fight against the provincial government's action.

Not only would such a "beanery" detract from the aesthetic appeal of the attractive environment for which the taxpayer has paid so heavily, it would seem to serve no necessary purpose since the area is already served by several good sandwich bars, small businesses which would in fact be paying taxes to fund operations set up to compete against them.

I was pleased to see that Mr. Hood is against this latest NDP interference in the affairs of this city, and assure him that many concerned citizens fully support him.

Surely the NDP was elected to direct the affairs of the province, not to run sandwich bars.—D. G. Weston, 1215 Montrose Avenue.

CANDU Madness

I would like to express warm appreciation of your excellent editorial of June 19 questioning the sale of nuclear reactors by Canada to South Korea and Argentina. To this objeection, I would like to include proposals for similar sales to Iran.

With a United States nuclear reactor now under construction in South Korea, and with a proposal from France to build a plutonium separation plant, where does the proposed sale of a Candu reactor, which produces twice the amount of plutonium as the enriched uranium reactor, come in? It is not hard to see that South Korea would break any obligation to use peacefully such a reactor when it felt this to be in its interest.

The South Korean dictatorship of General Park Chung Hee is not now dealing fairly with its own people, who want less repression. Its leading churchmen are being mistreated and intimidated and this has consolidated church sentiment more strongly against the Park government.

To strengthen Park's hand against such views would be disservice to justice and fair play in Korea, as well as to similar thought in Canada. Why should Canada prop up this kind of dictatorship? Canada's role ought to be couched in different terms which avoid hyprocrisy, as your editorial also claims.

A CANDU reactor to Argentina would also be the utmost folly. It could be taken over by a regime friendly to these powers, and hope for Latin American political freedom could be greatly endangered.

Even for the sake of several hundred million dollars, is Canada prepared to play this game? If so, we need to look again at Ottawa, and see where we are being led.

All success to the Conservative and NDP opposition in objecting to this program, which should be entirely squelched. — Harold T. Allen, 2140 Kings Road.

Male Motives

The males who keep objecting so indignantly to abortions on the grounds of "sanctity of life" are hypocritically forgetting that in thousands of years of history, including our own times, the male of the species was always preoccupied with, and indulging in, mass killings and murders under any pretext — wars, revolutions, religious fanaticism, personal greed, rape, etc.

From the Times of June 25, 1915

Justices of the peace W. W. Northcott and William Scowcroft delivered their decision in the case against Miss Ilsa Tuck, principal of the Spring Ridge school, brought by a father who claimed his son had been unduly whipped by Miss Tuck. "We have considered the case very carefully and gone into the evidence. We consider that the case is proven. Miss Tuck was too severe on that child." Their worships fined Miss Tuck $5, although the maximum fine in the matter is $20, because it was only her first offence.

Shucks, There Goes Another Conspiracy

By JAMES EAYRS

Just before dawn on Sunday, June 25, 1950, tanks and troops crossed the 38th parallel into South Korea, cut down whatever resistance met this surprise attack, and drove southward along the valley leading towards the city of Seoul less than forty miles away. So the Korean War began.

Or did it?

In answer to this question a debate often more acrimonious than scholarly has long been joined between historians convinced that this spare description does justice to what really happened and those who are convinced that it does not.

The debate began before the war had ended. In April 1952, the American journalist I. F. Stone, with a temerity on the order of an atheist who questions God's existence in an audience with the Pope, cast doubt on the orthodox explanation in his highly controversial The Hidden History of the Korean War.

Vested Interests

Stone was struck by a situation wherein four principal actors on the anti-communist side of the stage had strong vested interests in turning the struggle for power on the Korean peninsula into a shooting war. The Americans John Foster Dulles — then Republican adviser to the State Department and soon to be Secretary of State — and General Douglas MacArthur — U.S. supreme commander in the Far East — convinced that Asia, not Europe, was the arena where the show-down between the "free world" and communism would be decided, wanted an opportunity to bring American military might to bear upon the struggle. Chiang Kai-shek wanted war as a means to return to power on the Chinese mainland from which he had been only recently ejected. Finally, Syngmann Rhee, the president of South Korea, wanted war as a means to unify Korea under his control or at least as a distraction from the short-comings of his own regime which faced a mounting threat from the erosion of public support.

Evidence, striking if circumstantial, pointed to the conclusion — so I. F. Stone was impelled to argue — that whether by means of a collusive plot or only by tacit consent among these principals, South Korea had provoked the North's attack, and that primary responsibility for the war that followed lay more with Seoul than with Pyongyang.

Stone thus arraigned not only the official United States version of events but also the official United Nations version. (A UN observer team on which no Americans were represented was on the spot to confirm the fact of the North Korean attack as well as the defensive nature of the disposition of South Korean forces.) He endorsed instead the version of events put out by Pyongyang Radio at 11 a.m., June 25, 1950: "The so-called 'Defence Army' of the South Korea puppet regime started a surprise invasion of the north along the whole front of the 38th Parallel line at dawn on the 25th. The enemy, who started the surprise operation, invaded the territory north of the 38th Parallel line . . ."

Stone's accusation, levelled in the middle of a war still inflicting costly casualties upon his countrymen, seemed to many at the time to be fool-hardy if not downright treasonable. His reputation for matchless integrity in handling his source materials had yet to be attained, and was indeed long delayed on its account. As recently as 1970 a highly knowledgeable observer of the American scene could call I. F. Stone a "Stalinist hack." So contemptuous a put-down of today's undisputed dean of investigative journalism may be in part explained by the fact that the observer in question is the son of the Canadian ambassador to the United States at the time of the outbreak of the Korean war whose immediate response had been to plead for Canada's support for American involvement.

Htstorical Revisionists

"Since I learned on Sunday morning of the attack on South Korea," Hume Wrong cabled L. B. Pearson, then Secretary of State for External Affairs, on June 27 when President Harry Truman pledged American air and sea power to the beleaguered South Koreans, "I have been in doubt whether the necessary degree of resolution and military strength would be forthcoming here to defeat what must certainly be an effort directed by Moscow to undermine the position of the Western countries, and of the United States, in particular, in the Far East . . . I hope . . . you will feel able to welcome in cordial terms the action announced by the president."

Stone's interpretation, long abandoned and ascribed even by his well-wishers to a lapse of judgment lamentable if rare, is being revived with a view to its rehabilitation. The would-be rehabilitators are American historians loosely grouped under the rubic of "revisionists."

What the revisionists have in common is their determination to show that the United States must bear a greater share of the blame for the Cold War than it is commonly accorded in most Western history books. Korea is their test case. So overwhelming is the received opinion that North Korea (at the Soviet Union's instigation, at least with Moscow's blessing) started it, so impressive all the evidence that points to Pyongyang's complicity, that if it can somehow be shown otherwise nothing will be sacred and anything will go. (It will also be that much harder for American leaders to convince their people that the United States ought to fight another land war in Korea should all-out armed conflict between North and South occur a second time.)

Revisionists have riled defenders of the the faith, who have mounted a counter-revisionist attack. "The Kolko thesis regarding the outbreak of the Korean War," writes a critic of two of the leading exponents of the revisionist interpretation, "does not stand up well in the face of either the available evidence or rational speculation . . . We may hope that scholars will take sufficient time to root out those among them who are addicted to the practice of ignoring crucial evidence for the purpsoe of upholding strong theoretical predelictions." The Kolkos respond with majestic disdain. "These are strong and tactless words . . . and grave and unsubstantiated charges . . . There must be rational standards of temperate dialogue and proof, and the effusion of essays and books similar . . . in tone and quality bodes ill for the historical profession and augurs an intellectual reaction in American universities which, if continued, could strongly resemble the 1950s. For our part . . . we have more important tasks than to enter into time-consuming disputations . . ."

Above this din the muse of History is hard to hear. What on this 25th anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War can be adduced from all the evidence to help answer the vexed question of who started it?

Two new sources have appeared since the angry exchange quoted above was published in the November 1973 issue of the Pacific Historical Review.

One is an eye-witness account of the early weeks of the war as recorded by the first secretary of the American Embassy in Seoul. It is hard to read Harold Noble's narrative, Embassy at War, and still refuse to accept that the facts are not as the U.N. observer team stated them at the time: "Principal impression left with observers after their field tour is that South Korea Army is organized entirely for defence and is in no condition to carry out attack on large scale against forces of North . . ." The revisionist argument that United States policy-makers did all they could to goad the North Koreans into attacking the South as a pretext for American intervention is difficult to accept when one learns from Noble's account that most senior U.S. officials in Seoul, both political and military, were in various conditions of utter unreadiness on the morning of Sunday, June 25, 1950. Many were absent from their posts. (Noble himself was on furlough in Tokyo.) Pearl Harbor was by comparison a scene of utmost vigilance on the Sunday morning of its attack.

Locked in Archives

It is still possible — though hardly plausible — to reconcile this state of affairs with some high-level plot hatched at MacArthur's headquarters. MacArthur's grand design remains locked in the archives of the State Department and the MacArthur Memorial at Norfolk, Virginia. We do not know what might have transpired in the crucial series of meetings that took place between the general and the president of South Korea from 1945 to 1950.

But from the second volume of the Pearson memoirs comes support for the view that the general and the president were not plotting to bring about an American premptive war in the Far East by either provoking or enticing the North into an attack upon the South.

Early in February 1950, L. B. Pearson called on MacArthur at his Tokyo headquarters. MacArthur gave his Canadian visitor the benefit of his strategic appreciation. "He was not alarmist about the spread of communism on the mainland", Pearson recorded in his diary, "and surprised me by stating that with a chain of island bases in the Pacific from which American air power could be brought to bear on the continent, the United States had little to fear." The General went to the great map of the Pacific on the wall and indicated with his pointer the U.S. defence perimeter — that line where, if it were to be crossed by an enemy force, he would intervene to stop aggression. "His line did not include Korea", Pearson records. "I remarked on this and he said: "No, it would be very difficult, it would be embarrassing, it would be disappointing, it would be worrying if an enemy took Korea; but it is not vital to our security' ".

For revisionist historians and muckraking journalists, it is difficult, it is embarrassing, it is disappointing, it is worrying if the official explanation of events turns out to be in keeping with the facts. But it sometimes happens that it does.

Second Thoughts About 'New Math'

By FRED M. HECHINGER
New York Times

The new math swept into American classrooms in the reform-minded days of the New Frontier. Now, amid a wave of conservatism, academic critics of the new math charge that the sum of its parts does not add up to the total of its earlier promise.

As the educational pendulum swings back to the traditional Three R's, the mathematics that was dubbed "new" some 15 years ago is now being widely held responsible for an alleged decline in pupils' mathematical achievements. Parents, and some teachers, are sounding the alarm for a return to such basics as the multiplication tables. The reformers are on the defensive.

Prof. Morris Kline, a noted mathematician who opposed the new math from its very start and author of "Why Johnny Can't Add," urges a new direction "diametrically opposite to that taken by the new mathematics." He calls on teachers to teach mathematics not for its own sake but "as an integrated part of a liberal education."

Jerrold Zacharias, the physicist who was largely responsible for the science teaching reforms of the nineteen-fifties, calls the impact of the new math "on the whole negative." Along with other critics, he believes that the proponents of the new approach were too concerned with "pure mathematics" and paid too little attention to the practical uses of mathematics in the children's present and future lives.

Edward Vance, Principal of the Justin E. Rowland Elementary School in the South Euclid-Lyndhurst schools of surburban Cleveland, agrees. "New math was developed by university professors, sometimes without too much of an idea of how material was actually taught in schools," he observed.

When, why and how did the new math appear on the American education scene?

It was toward the end of the nineteen-fifties that some of the country's leading mathematicians began to share the same concerns that, a few years earlier, had alerted scientists to the need for dramatic changes in the teaching of physics, chemistry and biology. The launching of the first Soviet Sputnik had set off an agonizing reappraisal of American schools' science instruction. Such men as Dr. Zacharias and Bentley Glass, the biologist, introduced new ways of teaching science that stressed discovery through simple experimentation rather than the memorization of theorems.

New programs spread like wildfire. Before long, mathematicians joined the movement. Notwithstanding today's nostalgia for the old mathematics, in response to the current criticism of the new math, the fact is that for decades children had found mathematics boring, difficult and often meaningless. Under the gun of report cards and parental pressure, they swallowed the bitter medicine and learned to "do" their problems by rote, usually without much understanding and with very little enthusiasm.

The new mathematicians proposed to change all that by introducing youngsters in the elementary grades to the principles of mathematics. They taught children the language of math, very much as the new linguists of the era taught them foreign languages in the early grades. Indeed, they often deferred to mathematics as a foreign language.

Before youngsters were asked to commit to memory such things as the rules of addition and subtraction or the multiplication tables, they were instructed in the theory of "sets." They learned that a set is a collection of things, rather than a number. Thus, 4 apples and 3 oranges were a set of 7 things.

Two of the basic aspects of the set theory are union and intersection. For instance, the union of the set of all red things and the set of all automobiles is the set of all objects that are either red or automobiles. But the intersection of the same two sets is the set of all those objects that are both red and automobiles.

Matters became even more complicated when children were introduced to bases other than the generally used base 10 (which requires the use of the basic symbols from 1 to 9 and 0) with the result that the customary computations lead to answers other than those normally considered correct in everyday figuring.

The new math spread rapidly. At its height, a few years ago, it was estimated that 85 per cent of U.S. schools had adopted it in some form or other. Textbooks were published in rapid succession. The leaders of the movement maintained that children's mathematical understanding had improved greatly.

More recently, however, the early critics were joined by others who expressed dissatisfaction, particularly with the performance of average and below-average students and especially with the difficulty the new programs posed to disadvantaged youngsters.

Such concern was underscored by what appeared to be declining test scores in statewide assessments of mathematical agility. Many 13-year-olds were found to be unable to do simple math problems. About a third could not get the right answers to a set of four simple computations with whole numbers. Almost two-thirds could not solve simple "word problems" ("If John drives at an average speed of 50 miles an hour, how many hours will it take him to drive 275 miles?") In fairness, it must be said that American children came out poorly on computation tests long before the new math was introduced.

What, in the view of those who charge the new math with serious shortcomings, went wrong?

Dr. Zacharias blames, in part, the professional mathematicians' excessive stress on the "purity" of the math as a theory, with too little understanding for the need for practical application.

While the proponents of the new math never intended that children stop learning the multiplication tables, or such computative skills as "carrying" in additions or "borrowing" in subtractions, the total amount of time spent on the new study of sophisticated theories and terminology did, in fact, take time away from the old skills.

Even more serious than such flaws — many of them subject to adjustment and correction — was the fact that the massive changes were introduced, like so many reforms before and since, without proper preparation of teachers.

Jeremy Kilpatrick, associate professor of mathematics at Teachers College, Columbia University, who remains basically sympathetic to many of the goals of the new math, said: "Elementary school teachers have not enough contact with any kind of mathematics, old or new. Some have not taken a math course since their own high school days. These teachers will be uncomfortable with any math." Mathematics thus takes a back seat to the teachers' concern with reading and social studies.

In addition, the new math puzzled and frustrated parents. The books their children brought home were incomprehensible to them, and so they stayed away from any attempts to supervise the new math homework or to augment classroom instruction with home drill. Most parents were far from proficient in their own math, but at least they could understand the texts and the assignments.

Does all this mean that the new math is dead or that it has made no lasting contribution?

Moderate critics reject such an extreme assessment and advise against an all-out counterattack. While conceding that "the new math has serious problems," James F. Gray, a member of the board of directors of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, nevertheless counsels:

"Any revolutionary period is full of confusion and trauma, but the essential changes it produces — often obscured until many years later — are major breakthroughs."

What of the future?

Despite all the fireworks, there is a growing consensus that a return to the sterile teaching of the Third R by rote and drill would be a serious mistake. "Wholesale . . . condemnations of the new math are meaningless and counterproductive," says Mr. Gray. The task now, the mathematician adds, is rather "to dispel the confusion that has surrounded its early stages, and to promote the best in it and eliminate its problems."

Most signs point in one direction—greater stress on the uses of mathematics and what the counter-reformers call "hands-on" materials to translate theory into practice.

Thumbs Down Given Three B.C. Companies

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

An eastern investment house, in surveying the prospects of 21 low-priced stocks on the Toronto exchange, has sent out the word to sell three of them. Two of them are Vancouver-based companies.

Canadian Business Service has turned thumbs down on Neonex International, Craigmont Mines and Guaranty Trust Co. of Canada.

Neonex is the once-mighty conglomerate controlled by James Pattison of Vancouver that was selling at $21 a share and now is down to $1.50. Its immediate prospects are not bright.

Neonex lost a nickel a share in the first quarter of this year, down from a profit of a penny a share in the same quarter of 1974. The company is widely-diversified but has been hampered by low sales in its mobile homes and leisure vehicle division as a result of a continuing concern about the availability of gasoline.

Pattison continues to buy Neonex shares as they come on the market each month, according to insider reports.

Craigmont Mines Ltd. of Vancouver is also facing a bleak future, according to the investment house report. Low reserves of ore along with low metal prices and high taxation make the company's prospects unattractive for the near term.

The sell sign has also gone up for Guaranty Trust, which has a large portfolio of low-yielding mortgages. With new mortgages going out at high interest rates, companies with large amounts of funds in low-interest mortgages are at a disadvantage.

The company may improve slightly on its 1974 earnings, but they were not impressive at just under a nickel a share.

While the investment house was not urging investors to sell shares of Carling O'Keefe, it said the outlook for the stock is not bright for the immediate future.

Canada's largest brewery continues to report lower sales in its U.S. and Irish markets but its Canadian sales volume is holding steady.

The company lost money last year and likely will operate at a deficit again this year.

The stock was at $3 two weeks ago and is down to $2.65 as of Tuesday afternoon. Shares could be held as a speculation, however, according to the investment house.

Presumably the thinking is that things cannot get much worse.

The investment house studied the list of 21 stocks to demonstrate that shares are not necessarily a good buy just because they are selling at unusally low levels.

Low-priced issues often take off at the beginning of a bull market or just as the market reaches its peak but, at most times, low-priced issues fare no better than high-priced stocks and may do a lot worse.

ASSISTANT TO SECRETARY-MANAGER

There is an immediate opening for an assistant to the Secretary-Manager of the Northern Interior Lumber Sector of the Council of Forest Industries of B.C. The position, based in Prince George, will include staff work for various committees such as Forestry and Transportation, and other matters related to the effective operation of an Industry Trade Association.

A recent University or Technical School graduate in either Forestry or Commerce is preferred. Well-developed personal communication skills are highly desirable. Previous experience in the B.C. Interior Lumber industry and in dealing with committees would be an asset.

Apply in writing to Mr. E. V. Scotfield:

ROYAL COMMISSION ON CORPORATE CONCENTRATION

The Royal Commission on Corporate Concentration established by Orders-in-Council P.C. 1975-879 of April 22, and P.C. 1975-999 of May 1st, 1975 opened its offices at Suite 108, 140 Wellington Street, Ottawa, K1P 5A2. Telephone (613) 995-9706.

TERMS OF REFERENCE OF THE COMMISSION

"to inquire into, report upon, and made recommendations concerning:

(a) the nature and role of major concentrations of corporate power in Canada;

(b) the economic and social implications for the public interest of such concentrations; and

(c) whether safeguards exist or may be required to protect the public interest in the presence of such concentrations."

The Royal Commission invites interested persons or organizations to send written briefs or letters (in 8 copies) on the matters into which the Commission has been asked to inquire. Since the terms of reference of the Commission are very broad, those wishing to make a written submission may wish to refer to the more specific areas of initial interest set out by the Commission in a press statement being issued (copies are available on request). All submissions should be sent as early as possible but in any event no later than October 10th so that the Commission may study them in advance of public hearings which are planned for November. Those who wish to be heard in public should so indicate. The location and dates of these hearings will be announced in a forthcoming advertisement in this paper. All submissions should be addressed to Serge Bourque, Executive Secretary of the Commission.

No Detour Signs When Bob Works

Highway construction delayed the Nanaimo team's appearance for Tuesday's Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Central Park, but it did nothing to slow down Bob Swanson.

The burly pitcher handcuffed Ingraham Hotel on three hits and went three-for-three at the plate to spark Nanaimo to a 4-0 victory.

A two-run single by Chris Finstone and George Banks' two-run homer gave Swanson all the working room he needed. Al Mann, with a double and single, and Mike Cox were the only Ingraham players to collect hits off Swanson.

Irv Hawkins unloaded a three-run homer at Sanscha Park to lead Harvey's Sporting Goods to a 10-8 victory over Cloverdale Point and Paper in a Sidney Men's League game.

The win boosted Harvey's into a first-place tie with Sidney Hotel.

Tom Hatcher belted a grand-slam homer for Cloverdale.

Capital Builders scored four runs in the final inning to decision Molsons 5-1 in Heywood Men's League activity. Al Burnell's three-run triple was the big blow at Heywood Avenue Park as winning pitcher Bob Dobish checked Molsons on three hits.

Diane Sluggett drove in three runs with a single and two doubles and Darlene Marshall won the pitching decision as Esquimalt Combos upset Stockers 8-6 in Senior Women's League play at Hyacinth Park.

It was only the second loss of the season for the leading Stockers.

In another game, CJVI Vicettes trounced last-place Seaboard Construction 29-3 to move to within three ponts of Stockers.

WAKEHAM MISSES CUT IN WASHINGTON OPEN

TACOMA (AP) — Gordy Hepp, 40, a suburban Seattle teaching pro, and Fred Haney, a 26-year-old Portland assistant, carded three-under-par 68s Tuesday to share the second-round lead in the $20,000 Washington State Open golf tournament.

Their 139 totals, three below regulation for 36 holes, led Bob Kelly, an assistant at the host Oakbrook club, by a stroke as 95 from a field of 192 qualified for the final 18 holes today.

QUEBECOIS IN FRONT AS CARIBOUS CLIPPED

Montreal Quebecois took over sole possession of first place in the National Lacrosse League Tuesday by tripping Quebec Caribous 12-8.

Victory moved Quebecois two points ahead of Maryland Arrows.

Tomahawks are now in third place, two points behind Arrows andthree ahead of fourth-place Wings.

Astrodome Empire Deep in Debt

HOUSTON (UPI) — Judge Roy Hofheinz, the sports entrepreneur who wanted a colosseum to rival that of ancient Rome, has lost control of the Astrodome and his entertainment empire because of crushing debts of $38 million, the Houston Chronicle reported Tuesday.

In a copyrighted story in its afternoon editions, the Chronicle said Ford Credit Corp., General Electric Credit Corp., and HNC Realty, holding mortgage notes for $38 million, have been assigned authority to run the sprawling complex.

An Astrodome spokesman said Hofheinz, will remain as chairman of the board. Sidney Schlenke, first vice-president, said the action was a credit rearrangement with Hofheinz, T. H. Neyland, president of the Astrodomain Corp. and its subsidiaires, and Schlenker running the operation.

"We are in the process of completing a rearrangement of our long-term credit with major lenders which will greatly increase the viability of our company to operate in an efficient manner," Schlenker said in a brief statement.

"The part of the Chronicle story relating to Judge Roy Hofheniz losing control is not true. The judge will retain the title of chairman of the board and will continue to be active as he has been in the past two years.

Included in the action beside the Astrodome are the Houston Astros baseball team, four luxury hotels and the Astroworld Amusement Park, all worth from $60 to $100 million but not considered capable of generating quick cash. The amusement park has been transferred under a long-term lease agreement to the corporation which runs the Six Flags Amusement Parks.

The Astrodome has always been the judge's pet project.

"I take a major part in damn near everything that's done out here: Good, bad or indifferent," Hofheinz said recently.

Hofheinz, 63, owned 50 per cent of the Astrodomain Corp., and the other 50 per cent was left in trust for the three Hofheinz children. The children, Roy Jr., a Harvard professor Dene, of Los Angeles, and Fred, current mayor of Houston, reportedly met in family council more than a week ago and agreed to relinquich control of their holdings, the Chronicle said.

Three Island Players Attend National Camp

Three players from Vancouver Island — Ray Telford of Nanaimo and Victorians Bob Bolitho and Brian Robinson — have been picked to attend the national soccer team training camp in Toronto.

Telford, who represented Canada on several occasions in the early 1970s and played for Nanaimo City in the Vancouver Island League last season, headed for Upper Canada College today.

Bolitho and Robinson, both national team players last year and both members of the provincial and Island-champion Victoria London Boxing Club squad, are expected to leave July 3.

Bill McAllister of Victoria, is replacing national coach Eckhard Krautzan, has about two weeks to prepare the Canadian squad for a six-match exhibition series that will help serve as a warm-up for the 1976 Olympic Games.

McAllister and his scouts have selected players from B.C., Ontario and Quebec for the camp and the first exhibition game will be July 6 in Montreal against Poland.

The national team faces Poland again July 9 in Toronto and tackles East Germany on July 29 in Toronto and July 31 in Montreal. Hungary completes the exhibition schedule with games Aug. 6 in Toronto and Aug. 10 in Montreal.

ESQUIMALT STREAK SNAPPED

In regular-season play, Esquimalt hadn't been beaten by any Vancouver Island team in the B.C. Junior "B" Lacrosse League for the past three years.

Victoria Island Pacific Oil ended all that by clipping Esquimalt 15-13 Tuesday night at Memorial Arena.

Rhys Wicks and Mark Schoor led the Victoria triumph with three goals each. Double tallies were notched by Juane Ferguson, Tej Labh, Forrest Owens and Bill Kaye while Cleve Dheensaw chipped in a single.

Ross McKinstry and John Entzminger scored four goals each for Esquimalt, unbeaten in 10 games this season. Steve Buckley scored two goals while singles were fired by Dale Roberts, Brian McKinnon and Lance Hobbs.

Victoria outshot Esquimalt 53-42 and pushed a winning streak to four games with the victory. Kelvin Gill, who had an outstanding game, has been in the Victoria net for the past three wins.

Stu Rhodes led Saanich with three goals, Gord Horth and Terry Gibbard scored twice each and singles were added by Joe Kolic, Keith Thompson, Bill Van Buskirk, Mike Jacob, Al McLaren and Wayne Larson.

Tom Graham Joins Squad

SUDBURY (CP) — Two players from British Columbia have been added to Canada's Olympic volleyball training squad, bringing the total on the team to 15.

Glen Burrell of Williams Lake and Tom Graham of Comox were among five players chosen during the weekend at the Canadian volleyball association trials.

Burrell and Graham will go to Montreal where the squad is to train for a pre-Olympic tournament July 7.

Tennis Plan Survives Hectic Day

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

For five hours Tuesday afternoon, it looked as if World Team Tennis had double faulted itself right out of town.

But somewhere over the Strait of Georgia two representatives of the Hawaii Leis changed their minds and, as a result, the team will play three of its WTT matches at Memorial Arena next month.

It all started at a Tuesday noon press conference at the Empress in which Edgar Rhomberg, overseer of the Island Indoor Tennis layout, announced that the deal to bring in the matches had all but fallen through.

It ended about 5 p.m. up at Island Indoor Tennis with a phone call to Rhomberg and another hurried press conference in which he announced the show was on again.

In between, Rhomberg got a crash course in dealing with professional sports promoters. He learned that in pro sports, as in any other business, it helps to drive a hard bargain.

Here's what happened:

Rhomberg called the first press conference to announce the matches had been arranged for July 24 against Los Angeles Strings, July 28 against Cleveland Nets and July 29 against San Diego Friars at Memorial.

But in talks with Hawaii vice-president Rudy Tulipani and lawyer Roy Vallarino on Tuesday morning, Rhomberg for the first time was told he had to put up a $30,000 guarantee.

Rhomberg loves tennis, but business is business and that kind of money wasn't worth the risk. And WTT these days is a risky business.

Payrolls run an estimated $300,000 to $400,000 a season with players like Billie Jean King getting $130,000 from the New York Sets. But the 12 WTT teams are still a long way from making that kind of money. The Sets, for example, played the first of their 11 home games two weeks ago and drew 2,095.

Rhomberg also knew that the Florida franchise folded last fall after its first season owing player Mark Cox $30,000 in back salary.

Cox, now playing for Pittsburgh Triangles, believes WTT can succeed in the long run and he may be right.

The game is streamlined and easy to understand under WTT scoring rules and the customers are guaranteed that name players like Mrs. King, Margaret Court and John Newcombe will be in action. That's something tournament tennis can't promise, of course.

What really bothered Rhomberg, however, was the fact that his partner in the deal, Mike McGraw of Calgary, suddenly developed cold feet. McGraw was to put up the necessary guarantees for two matches in Edmonton involving Indiana Loves. But after he backed out, Tulipani and Vallarino wanted Rhomberg to guarantee those matches, too.

No way.

That was pretty well how matters stood when Tulipani and Vallarino caught the 4 p.m. flight to Vancouver, although Rhomberg in the meantime had contacted McGraw, who relented and agreed to go as high as a $5,000 guarantee.

Still no way.

Then came the 5 o'clock phone call in which Tulipani and Vallarino agreed to come for no guarantee at all. Instead, they were willing to bring in Hawaii for the three July dates at Memorial if they could take the first $15,000 in gate receipts, after the arena took a rental of 10 per cent. Rhomberg in turn would put up about $7,500 for promotion and advertising. Anything over $15,000 would be split with Hawaii taking 60 per cent and Rhomberg 40.

The deal was on.

All that remains now is for Rhomberg to sign the agreement, which he was to do today in Edmonton.

Once he has signed, Victoria tennis fans will see Mrs. Court, Newcombe, Helen Gourlay, Owen Davidson, Butch Bucholtz, Tom Edlefson, Barry McKay and Kathy Kuykendall, all members of the Leis, in action.

Top players with Los Angeles include Rosy Casals, Bob Lutz and Ross Case. San Diego has Dennis Ralston and Lesley Hunt and Cleveland includes Marty Reissen, Ann Haydyn-Jones and Clark Graebner.

To see all this talent, fans will have to pay a flat admission fee of $5 a night, or $12 for all three matches, with youngsters under 14 and old age pensioners getting in for $2.50.

At those prices, Rhomberg will need to average between 2,500 and 3,000 fans a night to break even, a figure he feels is realistic enough to gamble on.

EDGAR RHOMBERG

And if the gamble pays off, he hopes to have Hawaii play as many as holf its home games in Victoria next year.

Pele: 'Pure Football' As Played by the King

The legend not only grows, it lives on. The world's greatest soccer player is considered to be Edson Arantes Do Nascimento, and now British Columbians are going to have the opportunity to see him play. The Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League have booked him and his parent club, the New York Cosmos, into Empire Stadium on July 7. And there's little doubt that the Whitecaps will at least double their previous best attendance mark on this occasion, and probably triple it.

Yes, this should be an instant success, because the brilliant Brazilian the Cosmos have under lock and key is Pele who has scored more than 1,000 goals in his professional career and is also one of the world's richest athletes. Throughout the entire athletic world, hardly anyone outside the narrow realm of North America has heard of Henry Aaron, but the name of Pele is universal and has been almost since the very beginning of his international career.

It is strange too, that such a name could have such a ring to it, because its origin is hidden in vagueness and I suppose it could be said that no-one really knows how he got that name.

The nearest that historians have come up with is that Pele comes from the Portuguese word "Peleda" which is used to describe a pickup game of football with a make-shift ball made of rags. And as Pele was the best soccer player in the streets when he was a boy he was the pelad king . . . and finally out of this came Pele.

At 13, He Played With Men

At any rate, he excites soccer people, and has done so since his youth. It is said that when he was just 13 years of age, he was playing for a junior team and in one game scored nine goals in an 11-0 victory. Within one week, he was called up to the village team where he lived and was playing with the men.

That wasn't all. Before another month was finished, a scout from the famous Santos team came to watch the boy whizz display his skill, grabbed him at half time and had him sign a two-year option that would make him Santos property on his 15th birthday.

He then joined Santos, was a sensation, the pride of Brazil, and when only 16 was picked to play on the national team against Argentina. Brazil lost 3-0 but it was said then that he was the best player on the Brazilian side.

In 1958, when he was 17, he was on Brazil's World Cup team, and it was against Wales he scored his first of 100 World Cup goals. At the same tournament in Sweden he scored three goals against France and in the final against Sweden he scored the clinching goal in a 3-1 win that was described then as "a thing of pure wonder."

From then he just got better, and very rich too. By 1966 he was earning in the neighborhood of $150,000 a year and after that and until his retirement nine months ago, he never earned any less.

At Any Price, the Fan Wins

Now it is said that he has signed with the Cosmos for $7 million, but other stories insist the figure isn't that high. Not that he isn't worth it, he is Because a few years ago, Inter-Milan of Italy offered Santos 450,000 pounds for his transfer and that works out to over $1 million. If that deal had gone through his personal gain would have been around $200,000. But he was too valuable to leave Brazil, and until this newest sojourn with the Cosmos, it wasn't thought he would come out of retirement in this fashion. But he did and the North American soccer fan is the winner.

His first game at Randall's Island was only an exhibition, but the place was almost packed, his appearance generating more interest in the New York area than anything but a heavyweight championship fight. Last week after a game there was a riot, Pele reportedly was slightly injured, and now the Cosmos are demanding protection for their star. But that's the type of adulation he demands, and gets.

When the Cosmos play in Vancouver it will be an exhibition game and if it proves anything else than Pele is the draw it probably will be that at least soccer has discovered that this is an excellent way of making money right in the middle of the regular season.

The Columbia Broadcasting System found that out right at the outset. CBS paid $50,000 for the right to televise the game nationally and distribute it world wide; calling it "an event of interest that transcends the world of soccer." And in just four days had no trouble selling 32 units of 50-second commercial time at $7,000 apiece.

Or as one announcer said: "With Pele you're seeing pure football; something you haven't had in North America before."

Smith stretches for return at Wimbledon

YOUNG SOUTH AFRICAN EASILY WHIPS SMITH

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — A month ago 22-year-old Byron Bertram of South Africa hadn't played tennis for nearly a year.

But in one hour's play Tuesday, he scored the upset of the 1975 Wimbledon championships by beating No. 7 seed Stan Smith of the United States 6-1, 6-2, 6-1 with an almost invincible flurry of accurate returns and volleys.

"It was the best I've ever played," said the tall, blonde South African, who failed to qualify for the tournament a year ago.

"I just played phenomenally well and Stan played very poorly."

But from the start Smith's big serve proved no problem to Bertram, who countered with accurate cross-court returns.

It took Bertram just 15 minutes to polish off the first set in which Smith took only a handful of points from his opponent's service.

Meanwhile, Arthur Ashe, Marty Riessen and Roscoe Tanner led a high-powered American men's charge and Chris Evert successfully began defence of her women's title.

More than 30,000 fans thronged the All-England Club as good weather helped tournament officials catch up with some of the backlog of matches caused by Monday's rain.

Ashe, the No. 6 seed who had won one set of his first-round match Monday night, completed a 7-5, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 victory over Bob Hewitt of South Africa.

Riessen, seeded 13th, easily reached the second round, beating Patrick Proisy of France 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

Tanner, the No. 11 seed, outgunned fellow American Bob Lutz 8-6, 6-1, 8-9, 6-4.

A sellout crowd of 17,000 jammed the centre court to see the Ashe-Hewitt duel.

At one stage in the second set, when the match hung in the balance, Hewitt double faulted five times in six serves.

Ten of Dozen Gain Playoffs

LETHBRIDGE — The Western Canada Hockey League will squeeze two more teams into the playoffs, Ed Chynoweth is back as president, and Victoria Cougars are staying with a schedule format that proved so successful last season.

Approval of a playoff system that will allow 10 of the league's 12 teams into the post-seasons scramble highlighted the second day's business at the annual WCHL meetings.

The top three clubs in both the Western and Eastern Division will qualify for the playoffs. Four of the six remaining clubs will qualify on the basis of point totals, a novel format designed, said Chynoweth, to "get the best clubs in" and "to make it interesting right down to the wire."

Under the new format, it's possible for all six teams in one division to advance to the playoffs. That could happen if the fourth, fifth and sixth-place finishers all wound up with more points than the bottom two teams in the other division.

Chynoweth, returned as president for a third straight year, also said the WCHL established guidelines for the use of up to four "overage" players.

Teams will retain exclusive rights to their graduates up to a yet-to-be-determined signing date, overage (over 19) players not signed will be placed in a common draft and will be available to other teams.

Cougars will open their 72-game schedule Oct. 3 in New Westminster, then will face the defending league champion Bruins in Memorial Arena the following night.

After that, Cougars will embark on an eight-game road trip to the Prairies.

Cougars opened the 1974-75 campaign in similar fashion and, after spectacular success on the road trip, went on to take first place in the Western Division.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

Alexander Passes 100-Point Plateau

With the deft stickhandling and passing which have become his trademarks, Kevin Alexander sparked Victoria McDonalds to an 18-10 triumph over last-place Coquitlam J-Hawks at a Western Canada Junior "A" Lacrosse League game Tuesday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Alexander topped the 100-point plateau for this season with four goals and five assists. He now has 106 points. Last year he won the scoring title with 155 points. He did not play the last 10 minutes on Tuesday.

J-Hawks, who trailed 6-2 after the first period, managed to narrow the gap to 9-5 near the mid-point of the second period before a three-goal Victoria surge put things out of reach.

Bob Cool, who finished with two goals and six assists, fed two scoring passes to Alexander and then scored one himself on a return favor to put Bakers ahead 12-5 — all within the span of one minute.

Ken King, Charlie Randle, Phil Ashbee, Mike Bryson and Mark Bowles each scored twice for Victoria and singles were added by Joe Mottishaw and Gerry Cadwallader.

Arlene Cook scored two goals to pace the J-Hawks, who trailed 13-5 going into the final period. Singles were fired by Boyd Hunter, Eric Otterstorm, John Uveges, Joe Jamieson, Brent Whitty, Tim Murphy, Noel Oldham and Al Gillespie.

The game also marked the return of goalkeeper Dennis McLean to the Victoria lineup. He turned in a solid performance during the first 30 minutes before giving way to Mick Michaux.

McLean's arrival was timely in another sense for McDonalds, who lost the services of goalie Al Radley through a shoulder ailment over the weekend. Radley is expected to be ready to play before Friday's game in New Westminster.

Elsewhere in the league, New Westminster Salmonbellies upset leading Burnaby Cablevision 14-10 at Queen's Park Arena.

New Westminster led 5-3 after one period and 9-6 after the second.

Home-Floor Ace Absent Tonight

Victoria Shamrocks have been unstoppable on their home floor during the first half of the Western Lacrosse Association season, and one of the reasons has been Ron MacNeil.

The high-scoring Victoria centre has been a major contributer in attacks that have enabled the Rocks to win their first five home games.

Now the Shamrocks are about to find out just what the part-time performer means to the cause.

Barring a last-minute change in work duties, MacNeil will be the major absentee tonight when the Shamrocks entertain New Westminster Salmonbellies in a bid to run their Memorial Arena win streak to six games.

Game time is 8 p.m.

MacNeil, who hasn't been able to play any road games this season, now finds he can't make it tonight. The reason, says coach Archie Browning, is an out-of-town work assignment.

In the five games he has played at home, MacNeil has scored 24 points, including 14 in the last two. The talented Ontario-bred speedster was the WLA's third highest scorer last season with 100 points, including 54 goals.

He's already missed five road trips because of work commitments but still stands fourth in team scoring with 18 goals and 36 points.

In addition to MacNeil, big Bob Turkington also is scheduled to sit out tonight's game because of a chest injury.

The Adancs upset Victoria 18-15 in overtime and, continuing a revival, came back Tuesday to jolt the co-leading Vancouver Burrards 12-10 to move into a fourth-place tie with Nanaimo Timbermen.

Gord Frederickson scored four times for Vancouver while Bob Holmes, Ward Sanderson and Ron Pinder each fired two. Pinder's goals gave him 47 for the season. He also had an assist to run his league-leading points total to 92.

Former Storm Joins Alouettes

MONTREAL (CP) — Charles Hinton, a 24-year-old defence halfback from the University of Southern California, has signed a contract with Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League. The signing of Hinton, who played with Portland Storm of the World Football League last season, left the Als with 53 players — 29 Americans and 24 Canadians — on their training camp roster.

GOLDEN PAYOFF

MONTICELLO, N.Y. (AP) — Owners of the first eight finishers in Friday's $300,000 Monticello Classic, the richest harness race in history, will be paid in gold bars.

Sandy Has Two-Under Total But Only Tie for Top Spot

TRAIL — Defending champion Sandy Harper of Nanaimo fired a two-under-par 69 but he still had to move over and make room for Brian Christie in the British Columbia junior golf championship.

The 17-year-old Christie, from North Vancouver, fired a four-under 67 to tie Harper for the lead at the halfway point of the 72-hole tournament.

Both had 141 totals, two under for the first two rounds and one stroke ahead of Jim Goddard, an 18-year-old Vancouver player who originally planned to pass up the tournament.

Brian Christie's card showed five birdies, including four on the first nine.

He admitted he "felt confident" after the first four birdies.

The tourney is alternating between Trail and Castlegar courses and Harper said he felt the Trail course was the tougher.

"The steady wind was a problem for me, although I played more consistently than Monday, chipping well from just off the green," Harper said.

Goddard felt he played better from tee to green Tuesday but expects the courses to be much harder for the third round at Castlegar today and the final round in Trail Thursday.

The entry of 135 golfers was trimmed to 100 after Tuesday's play. It will be reduced to 50 by Thursday.

Goddard had decided not to enter the tournament because of the travelling expense and was a late entry after hitching a ride with tournament chairman Fred Wellsby of Burnaby.

He led a four-man Seymour club team to victory in Avery Cup play by a 17-stroke margin over Nanaimo. Some 18 clubs competed for the cup during the first two rounds of the tournament.

Victoria's top hopes stood eight strokes off the pace. Jim Rutledge of Cedar Hill and Uplands' Russ Reynolds, who finished 1-2 in the Victoria junior tournament, had 149 totals.

It's Time to Salute the Small, Brave Men

By RED SMITH

NEW YORK (NYT) — The Irish Sweeps Derby comes off Saturday at the Curragh in Kildare, and if all goes according to plan, this reporter will be there, not in a professional capacity but in quest of spiritual fulfillment.

A dozen or so years have passed since opportunity last presented itself to watch the best three-year-olds in Ireland make their way up hill and down over the grassy fishook of a mile and a half that is the Derby course.

On that occasion the favorite was Raymond Guest's English Derby winner, Larkspur, and the colt's owner arranged a victory party for the evening after the race.

It turned out that three of the first four horses to finish were owned by Americans, but it was Mrs. Howell E. Jackson's Tambourine II that won, with Townsend Martin's Sebring third and Larkspur back in fourth place.

Nevertheless, later an American ambassador to Ireland, Raymond Guest had the party anyway in the old Russell Hotel on St. Stephen's Green in Dublin.

"If he throws one like that after losing," a survivor said the next morning, "I don't think I want to be in range when he wins."

It is improbable that the Curragh has changed much between that Derby and this one. The Irish were running chariot races over this same real estate when England was part of the Roman Empire, and they are not inclined to alter or interrupt their sport. Last year, for example, the customers were warned during the post parade that a bomb threat had been received.

They stayed where they were and watched English Prince, owned by Mrs. Vera Hue-Williams, best Imperial Prince, owned by Mrs. Hue-Williams's husband Roger, no bombs.

It seems only fair on quitting these shores temporarily to leave behind something of value. In this instance it is a suggestion offered free of charge to the New York Racing Association and any other such groups that care to listen.

Isn't it about time racing took formal cognizance of the contributions made to the sport by that colorful band of small, brave men — the jockeys? Why not name a few major races for guys like Eddie Arcaro, Bill Shoemaker, Eric Guerin, Conn McCreary?

The Travers Stakes, eldest showcase event still contested in the United States, is named for William R. Travers, the stockbroker who backed the saloon brawler, John Morrissey, in bringing thoroughbred racing to Saratoga. August Belmont I, who gave his name to a Triple Crown event and the track where it is run, was another of the Beautiful People, an imported banker and art connoisseur.

The Dwyer Stakes, on the other hand, honors a pair of Brooklyn butchers. ("If you will come to the Union Club," said Fred Gebhart in 1882, "I will match Eole against Hindoo for $5,000 a side." "If you will come to our butcher shop," Phil Dwyer said, "we will match Hindoo against Eole for $10,000 a side.")

The first Peter A. B. Widener (Hialeah's Widener Stakes) was a butcher in Philadelphia. In New York the Carter Handicap came into being in 1895 when Capt. William Carter, a tugboat skipper, poured money into the new Aqueduct track, whose clubhouse was described as "a shanty held up by stilts."

Races have been named for politicians and statesmen from Peter Stuyvesant and Benjamin Franklin to William Collins Whitney and Bernard Baruch.

There are stakes saluting ladies like Betsy Ross, Molly Pitcher and Barbara Fritchie; Del Mar offers the Bing Crosby Handicap and Hollywood the Will Rogers Stakes.

There is a whole bouquet of flowers — the Chrysanthemum Handicap at Laurel, the Bougainvillea, Mimosa and Jasmine at Hialeah, the Black-Eyed Susan at Pimlico, Gardenie at Garden State, Orchid at Hollywood, and Churchill Downs hails a weed with its Golden Rod Stakes.

There are races named for rivers — the Schuylkill, Delaware, Swanee and Brandywine.

There is one for a drink (the Champagne), for a bird (the Flamingo), and for a cigarette (the Marlboro Cup).

Racing officials are frequently memorialized, but not racing officials who started as jockeys like Ted Atkinson, Warren Mehrtens and Johnny Rotz, stewards in Chicago, New York and Delaware.

The Downs at Gulfstream have a right to run a Down Handicap, but did James Down contribute as much to racing as Eddie Arcaro, did he have the class of Bill Shoemaker or Braulio Baeza, did he bring as much fun to the fame as Conn McCreary?

These little guys are among the greatest of athletes. Why can't racing salute them as such? After all, there's a race at Fort Erie called the Inferno Stakes, named for Hell. And Aqueduct unblushingly presents the Sport Page Handicap.

Gun Registration Law Would Serve No Purpose

Perhaps the very last thing this country needs right now is formation of a new federal bureaucracy to oversee registration of rifles and shotguns.

First, because of the immense cost involved.

And second, because Senator Cameron's gun control bill (S-14) — which has passed second reading and is currently sitting before the Senate Committee on legal constitutional affairs — or anything likely to spring from the study group commissioned by the Solicitor General's Department, isn't going to accomplish the purpose for which it is intended.

Col. L. H. Nicholson, a former commissioner of the RCMP who served with the force for a total of 36 years, had a few interesting points to make on the entire subject during a speech to the B.C. Wildlife Federation convention in Kamloops last month.

"Don't let them sell you on that — it will not help to solve crimes to any significant degree. I can dream up cases where it would help . . . But it wouldn't solve enough to make the effort worthwhile," he exclaimed.

Estimates of the number of rifles and shotguns in Canada range from a conservative six million (1968) to 12 million.

Using the procedure set out in S-14 and based on the low six million figure, Nicholson estimates it would take about 6,000 man years to get a rifle and shotgun registration program underway.

Think about that for awhile. It would take 6,000 men (persons, if you prefer) working one year just to get things rolling.

To keep the machine rolling, it would take about 480 man years.

The task would either have to be carried out by newly-hired staff, which would cost a bundle, or by present police personnel.

I think the police have better things to do than fiddle with extra paperwork.

And, ultimately, such an exercise in futility would be tragic in another sense. Not in terms of the high cost alone, but because it would affect the good citizen a lot more than the crook.

"The crook is not going to come forward and register his rifle and he's not going to ask for a permit to carry," said Nicholson. Handguns, severely restricted right now, are still being regularly used by criminals.

It also wouldn't help prevent slaughters like the one which recently took place in a Brampton high school of ones which have occurred during family disputes.

Why?

Simply because, up to the moment of their mental breakdown, the people who have perpetrated such acts have invariably been good citizens. In all likelihood, their guns would be registered if a gun control law was in effect.

So, what would registering all the rifles and shotguns in Canada really accomplish?

Doubtless it would serve as a convenient cosmetic remedy for some of the ills infecting our society but there are a number of positive things we can accomplish without draining valuable tax dollars into a dead end.

One of these would be to prohibit "all people convicted of a violent crime from having a gun," said Nicholson. This could also be extended to those who are on bail, who have received a suspended sentence or on parole.

Nicholson asks why a person who is on bail for a serious crime should "be able to pick up a gun without danger of getting in trouble."

"Take the case of the fellow who was arrested in a bank holdup, was out on bail in a matter of hours, and back on the street holding up another bank so he could pay his lawyer," Nicholson quipped.

He also cited several sections of present law which give police the right to seize firearms "where this is necessary in the interest of safety."

"I think this is a provision that hasn't been used enough. Had it been used, it would have prevented some of the tragedies that are now recorded."

And, in the final analysis, isn't that what it's all about — saving lives?

Barlow Takes Three Titles

Wendy Barlow of the host club won two titles and shared another while setting the pace for a near-sweep by Victoria girls in the Pacific Regional junior tennis championships which concluded Tuesday at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Miss Barlow topped clubmates Brenda Cameron in the under-18 division and Nina Bland in the under-16 section. She also partnered Miss Cameron, who had been topped ranked in the singles event, to a victory in the under-18 doubles final against Vancouverites Karen Kettenacker and Leslie Romer.

Andre Levey defeated Jennifer Bland in the all-Victoria under-14 final while Valerie Brice of Victoria won the under-12 crown with a victory over Susie Hunter of Vancouver.

Miss Levey and Lynn Bloomer of Vancouver combined talents to down Kirsten Pless and Julie Gildersleeve of Vancouver in the under-14 doubles final.

Bell topped Gerald Clerx in the under-18 singles and collected the under-16 title by beating George Borchert.

John Nicholls downed Arnold Kettenacker in the under-14 singles while Kettenacker and John Gillies downed Borchert and Nicholls in the under-14 doubles.

There was no under-16 doubles competition in either boys' or girls' divisions.

GYMNASTS SEEK TITLES

Four Victoria athletes will be among those competing in the 39th annual Canadian gymnastics championship Thursday through Sunday in Moncton, New Brunswick.

Jill Weinberg and Rayanne Petersen will compete in the junior women's class, while Kym Gordon is entered in the senior women's division and Philip Delesalle in the senior men's section.

In a recent announcement by the B.C. Gymnastics Association and the Canadian Gymnastics Association, the 1976 championships have been awarded to the University of Victoria.

Jockeys Handed Three-Day Ban

VANCOUVER — A pair of Exhibition Park jockeys begin three-day suspensions tonight for riding violations last Friday.

Gene Salas was suspended for careless riding aboard Flee Allnation in the ninth race. Dan Sanchez was suspended for the same infraction aboard Justice J. A. in the third race.

Entries for today's thoroughbred racing:

Norwegian Girl Runs to Record

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Grete Andersen of Norway set a world record for the women's 3000 metre Tuesday with a time of eight minutes, 46.6 seconds in a triangular track and field meet against East Germany and Sweden. The former record of 8:52.74 was set last year by Ludmila Bragina of the Soviet Union.

Gorge Nips Farmers

Gorge Hotel came up with four runs in the bottom of the seventh inning Tuesday to nip Farmer Construction 7-6 in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

Bob Bowles got things rolling by tripling in two runs, Bob Mabee singled in the tying run and Roy St. Denis hit a two-out double to bring Mabee in with the winning run.

SYMPHONY MEETING SWITCHED

The annual general meeting of the Victoria Symphony Society will be held in the auditorium of the Oak Bay junior secondary school Thursday at 8 p.m., not in Monterey School as previously announced.

A symphony spokesman said the change in locations was recommended by the Oak Bay fire marshal.

The agenda for the meeting at the school, 2101 Cadboro Bay Road, includes election of directors and annual reports.

Both the nominating committee of the symphony society and the petitioners' committee, a group within the society which has opposed some decisions made by the board of directors, have nominated full slates of candidates to fill the 16 vacancies on the board of directors.

The chairman of the board of directors is not directly elected by the membership to that position, but is chosen by the new board of directors from among its members.

Will the Never-on-Sunday Aldermen Please Stand Up!

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Never-on Sunday — or any other day, apparently — will Mayor Peter Pollen get a clear answer from his city council colleagues on their individual opinions as to the desirability or otherwise of Sunday trading.

The exasperated mayor tried repeatedly to obtain such a statement from the eight aldermen at Tuesday's caucus meeting. But he failed spectacularly, despite issuing a challenge to "show the political courage and guts to stand up individually and say it is or it isn't desirable."

All Pollen received by way of an answer was that council should not impose any bylaw restrictions on Sunday commercial activity.

POLLEN
. . . exasperated

That was the recommendation of a special sub-committee — Ald. Malcolm Anderson, Ald. Bob Ellis and Ald. Bill Tindall — which Pollen appointed about two months ago to look into the question.

When the two-page report of the committee came up for discussion Tuesday, Pollen noted that it was "brief to the point of being virtually useless."

Its chief failing, he said, was the lack of any specific recommendation on defining council's position.

"Either we are going to have an open Sunday, or a closed Sunday — with modifications allowing drug stores, Mom and Pop stores and so on to remain open."

Ald. Mike Young also wanted to know how the sub-committee members felt individually about the "open Sunday" question.

When Anderson, who headed the committee, merely repeated that its recommendation was for no controls, Pollen snapped: "Don't equivocate. Either you do or you don't."

Tindall, arguing that the status quo should remain, said if the city decided to legislate against Sunday trading in general it would have the difficult task of deciding which specific exemptions should be allowed.

That matter had already proved highly controversial in Ontario, he noted.

Ellis commented: "In my opinion this situation should be regulated by the market place."

"The Los Angeles approach, in other words," retorted the mayor.

Ald. Clyde Savage agreed with Tindall that no partial policy could be adopted; either council should impose a total ban or permit unrestricted opening.

Discussion finally petered out with a recommendation from Ald. Sam Bawlf that "the recommendation of the committee on roller skates be accepted by council and the committee be disbanded."

Added Young: "The question is whether the discharge should be honorable or dishonorable."

Three PSACs Fined In Walkout Aftermath

Three Victoria members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada were fined $50 in Victoria provincial court today after pleading guilty to unlawfully participating in a strike Dec. 19, 1974.

The three, Simon Grypma, Patrick Heffernan and Clarence Rose, all employees of Environment Canada's Victoria operation, were among 19 PSAC members charged today under the Public Service Staff Relations Act.

The other 16 PSAC members were remanded to July 16 or 17 for plea.

The charges arose after a one-day walkout Dec. 19 by about 125 PSAC members in the general labor and trades division in Victoria.

DALZELL
. . . "bloody rotten"

In all, 55 Victoria union members have received summonses on the charge of unlawfully participating in a strike and the remaining members will be charged in provincial court Thursday and Friday.

A total of about 800 PSAC members across Canada will face prosecution under similar charges.

Prosecutor Cecil Branson told the court that after the one-day walkout, employees of Environment Canada were asked by letter to produce a doctor's certificate verifying whether they had been sick for that day.

Branson said a letter was sent back to the management by the PSAC members at the environmental station, including the three who were fined today, saying they had not been sick but had been participating in a union study session.

Defence lawyer Alan Patterson asked Judge Douglas Campbell to levy a similar sentence as those given to federal air controllers in New Brunswick who had been charged earlier with the same offence. Patterson said the air controllers had been granted a conditional discharge, the condition being a $10 fine.

Campbell commented on the "responsive attitude" of those at the environmental station who had signed the letter to management, but said he did not agree with a conditional discharge and levied a $50 fine in each case.

Outside court, PSAC regional representative Tom Dalzell indicated that many of those facing similar charges will plead not guilty.

"We're certainly going to fight it," Dalzell said.

He said he was disappointed in the sentences levied in court today and felt that the three who pleaded guilty should have been given the same sentence as the New Brunswick air controllers.

"Here we're fined $50 and get a record with it which is bloody rotten. On top of that they lose a day's pay, for appearing in court."

Museum Move Miffs Mayor

City aldermen received a mild rebuke from Mayor Peter Pollen on Tuesday, for announcing during his absence on holiday that the Bastion Square Courthouse—home of the Maritime Museum—will be put up for sale or lease.

"I rather think it is a most unfortunate course of action. I am very strongly opposed to it," Pollen told council's weekly caucus meeting.

Pollen said he didn't think the city should apply any more pressure to the Maritime Museum to vacate the premises, until some long-term plan can be worked out with the provincial government.

Ald. Alf Hood, acting mayor during Pollen's vacation in Europe, was obviously taken aback and angered by the comments, which he said represented "a complete switch" in attitude.

"For months we've been hearing how useless this thing is . . . we seem to be going around in circles," he complained.

Ald. Sam Bawlf said it was not a case of applying "pressure" to the museum, but of determining the most appropriate use for a valuable piece of city-owned property.

Council took no action on reversing its earlier decision to advertise the property and await proposals.

Ask The Times

Q. I was intrigued to read in your paper that Saanich is going to try and make compost out of the weeds in Elk Lake and had trouble keeping them from spreading, even after they'd been cut. Is it because the weeds are a worse type than those in other Lakes? S.K.

A. Not really. Probably warm weather and algae, fed on sewage in the lake, contribute to the problem. As a matter of record, the worst water weeds for spreading were found on Kariba Lake in Africa in 1959. In a period of 11 months the mat-forming weed had choked an area of 77 square miles. By 1963 this had risen to 387 square miles.

City Proved Right In Eatery Dispute

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall admitted in the legislature Tuesday that the provincial government has no legal right to develop the Causeway Esso gas station site as a sandwich bar, or in any other way. (See page 3.)

In response to a question from Liberal leader David Anderson, Hall agreed that title to the property is held not by the government itself but by the provincially-funded beautification agency, the Capital Improvement District Commission.

The statement confirmed what city council members have been claiming for the past two weeks.

And it has been construed by aldermen as implying that the government will drop its proposal for a sandwich bar and arts and crafts boutique on the site. The city feels such development would be quite inappropriate on that location.

As part of its over-all plan for Inner Harbor improvement, Victoria purchased the property from Imperial Esso under an agreement for sale in March, 1974, with a down payment of $11,265.

Five months later the city assigned its rights as purchaser to the CIDC for the same amount, leaving the agency the right to acquire clear title on paying the balance of $221,485.

What actually happened, according to city information, is that the provincial government paid over the balance to Imperial Oil and acquired title. But this was subject to the agreement for sale in favor of CIDC, which is still registered against the title.

Therefore once CIDC hands over the $221,485 to the province it is entitled to obtain transfer of title — but from the province rather than from Imperial Oil.

Hall conceded Tuesday the government had acted only as a transfer agency.

City Hall sources say the CIDC cannot transfer property to the province except by resolution of the commission, whose members include elected municipal representatives.

Revenge? He's Never Heard of It

But you know, it's a nice change to meet someone like Alex Hutcheson.

For Alex isn't against the world. He's with it. Though it may seem sometimes that the world is against him, he doesn't mind. He puts things back together again. And he doesn't want revenge.

Unless you are a relative newcomer to Victoria, you probably already know of Alex Hutcheson, the genial owner of the Texaco service station Hutcheson Motors Ltd. at 1669 Fort Street. If you do then you probably know him better as either "Hutch" or "grandpa" for he's not one to stand on formalities.

And in case you didn't read the pages of this newspaper about 10 days ago, Hutch's place was "hit" by three teenagers from south of the border who made off without paying for a transmission repair bill, filled up their gas tank on the house and pocketed a few hundred dollars from the till.

Police picked up three suspects about two hours later but what was Hutch's response? Forget it. That's what he said. And he means it.

It's not that he condones that sort of thing. But he wouldn't lay charges against the youths because, he says, they have their whole lives ahead of them.

"Charging them would only start the kids on a record and that's not fair," he explains. "They'll probably never do anything wrong in their lives again."

Alex Hutcheson . . . he knows kids

Sounds a bit idealistic but it's not the first time that Hutch has let youngsters off the hook.

He's the dedicated type of community citizen who often stops to pick up piles of garbage when he sees them lying in the streets and carts them off in his car "just to help keep our little town nice and clean." And he is very proud of the appearance of his service station.

He'll show you the toilets, where the walls are lined with clean tiles and vases of flowers stand next to Kleenex boxes near the washbasins. And for the men there are bottles of aftershave lotion.

"We try a little harder," he says with a grin.

But someone has been trying even a little harder to desecrate what Hutch refers to as his "mini Butchart Gardens." Three times he has got the strip along the roadside sparkling with trees, shrubs, neatly-cut lawn and flowers. And three times vandals have left branches broken, flowerpot urns overturned and the place generally in a shambles.

Alex just shrugs and says "we generally manage to get things back in order." He's done it again, too. It's all back together again.

"Sometimes you do feel sort of 'why should I?'" he confesses. "But afterwards you think about it and you go back and put things together again and it's all right."

Alex Hutcheson has a long history of doing things for kids.

It goes way back to the time when he worked for the long-gone Jameson Motors Ltd. on Broughton Street.

"They let me use the top floor and I got old dolls and toys and repaired them and took them to poor kids for Christmas," Alex explains.

Helped by Doug Knight and Hope Sylvester, he got the names of all the poor families in Victoria "and we made sure everyone got a wrapped gift, an apple and an orange and some candy."

"Old Bob Jameson (who died some time ago) was a fair-minded man and a great teacher for me," says Hutch. "He was one of the finest men who ever lived in Victoria. I've got his picture hanging in my office now.

"It was in those days of playing Santa Claus that I met my wife Jean," says Alex. "She and her mother and some friends used to make the dresses for the dolls we repaired."

His wife, who died a year and-a-half ago, was fond of children and in her memory he has put in a little playground for the patients of the children's ward at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Alex has two children — Alexander Paul Hutcheson and Mrs. Susan Edwards — and three grandchildren, all living in Victoria.

"I think we're very quickly running out of lots of things . . . the important part of life," he says. "The whole outlook in life has become callous; people think only of themselves and they couldn't care less about anyone else.

max low

"These lads were up from the United States on holiday. They were 17 years old. I think everyone should be given a fair chance. And I think we should always try to nip something like that in the bud before it gets into their system.

"I don't think it's up to me to say 'hey you stole something and you must pay for it.' One of the lads came to me and said 'sorry' and returned $100, which is all he had left."

Hutch admits he was still about $280 out of pocket but adds quickly:

"But that's beside the point."

Doctor Fights Gorge Hospital

A former Victoria doctor claims he was "wrongfully dismissed from Gorge Road Hospital in an action which began in B.C. Supereme Court here this morning.

David Charles Arnott, 60, a medical doctor who was hired as medical co-ordinator at the hospital in September, 1969, claims the hospital breached its contract with him in June, 1973.

He contends the hospital "unilaterally" changed the terms of his employment creating conditions which were "unreasonable and impossible" for him to accept.

He was "thereby effectively and improperly dismissed from his employment," Arnott's lawyer, Donald Farquhar maintained in a statement of claim.

Arnott seeks general damages for what he alleges the hospital's failure to give reasonable notice of the changes in his term of employment. He seeks, as well, special damages of $10,185.20.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer appeared puzzled by Arnott's request for special damages which are being sought to cover the costs the doctor incurred in finding new employment, but agreed to hear the argument.

The case is expected to last three days, ending Friday.

The hospital, represented by lawyer Ken Murphy, denies Arnott was dismissed and adds Arnott terminated his employment himself without giving notice.

In the statement of claim Farquhar noted Arnott, a specialist in physical medicine and rehabilitation, was hired originally to hold four half-day sessions a week at $60 a day. The salary, he said, was set out in the B.C. Medical Association schedule of minimum fees.

However on Jan. 1, 1973, Arnott's duties were expanded to include conducting teaching clinics five times a year, overseeing the physical medicine department, and acting as screening physician and presiding chairman of the patient assessment committee.

The statement alleged Arnott's pay was accordingly increased in conformity to the BCMA schedule then in effect but three months later it was reduced.

Mafioso Confirms Assassination Plot

WASHINGTON (WP) — Underworld figure Johnny Roselli confirmed in Senate testimony Tuesday that he worked with the Central Intelligence Agency in the early 1960s in an effort to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

Escorted by Capital police who were assigned to help him duck photographers, Roselli appeared before the Senate Committee on Intelligence Operations in closed session for some three hours. Sources said he emphasized that he regards his work for the CIA as an assignment motivated solely by patriotism.

Chairman Frank Church (D—Idaho) declined to discuss Roselli's testimony in any detail but said it "did not depart" from what has already been published about Roselli's assignment.

Chicago Mafio boss San Giancana, who was murdered at his home in Oak Park, Ill., last week, also figured in the testimony, but, Church indicated, not as a major actor.

Giancana's West Coast lieutenant, Roselli was enlisted for the CIA in the waning days of the Eisenhower administration by Robert A. Maheu, a former FBI agent and then a consultant for billionaire Howard Hughes.

Several years ago, in seeking reduction of a prison sentence for a $1 million gin rummy cheating scheme in Los Angeles, Roselli said through an attorney that he not only worked with Maheu on a CIA-sponsored campaign to kill Castro, but even had a powerboat shot out from beneath him on one dash to the Cuban coast.

Roselli was reportedly involved in six separate attempts on Castro's life, including at least one scheme to poison the Cuban leader's food. The last attempt was said to have been made in early 1963.

Church said Roselli supplied the committee with "much greater detail and much greater understanding" than it previously had, but without identifying many of the individuals he worked with.

The committee accepted that, Church said, because Roselli "was worried that to name people other than those in the government might endanger their lives." Sources close to the committee said later that the fear was exaggerated, but that Roselli was not pressed for names because the committee had already obtained them from other sources.

Roselli, who is now 69, worked for the CIA out of Miami under the supervision of two CIA officers, James O'Connell and William Harvey. O'Connell has already testified before the Committee. Harvey, now retired and living in Indianapolis, is scheduled to testify today.

Maheu invoked the Fifth Amendment when called before the committee earlier this month, but is expected to testify soon under a grant of immunity from prosecution.

Roselli apparently did not deal with any government officials outside the CIA, Church said. The commiittee is attempting to find out what high-level authorizations the CIA may have gotten for various assassination plots and attempts during the Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

Asked by a foreign newsman how such schemes could have escaped the notice of the CIA's "Watchdog" committees in Congress, Church said: "The fact is that the watchdog committees of the Congress were not watching the dog."

Blast Kills Three

ANKARA — Three persons died and 25 more injured when dynamite exploded in a depot above a baker's shop at Keciborlu in west Anatolia, officials said. The provincial public prosecutor has opened an inquiry into the blast. The dynamite stock belonged to the local department of the state-run forestry commission, the Turkish state-owned radio said.

Rotating Strike Continues, 200 Off at Dockyard

More than 200 civilian employees at HMC Dockyard in Esquimalt are off the job today in the continuing rotating strikes by members of the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council.

MADISON, Wis. — If you don't like the girls next door sunbathing topless, you don't have to look, a Madison alderman maintains.

Robert Weidenbaum, alderman for the area, testified Tuesday that the co-op residents certainly do have some rights in the matter—the right not to look.

RENO, Nev.—Nevada's casinos do not seem worried about the type of strap-on minicomputer constructed by Sunnyvale, Calif., engineer Keith Taft in order to beat the gaming tables. Maybe that's because Taft lost $4,400 in 30 hours of playing blackjack uisng his device. Taft, who spent 2,000 hours studying the game and $50,000 building his device, is convinced that anybody could be a winner if he started with a sufficient bankroll. Now Taft wants to come out winners another way. He hopes Hollywood with film his story.

TORONTO — Judy LaMarsh, former secretary of state, has agreed to be host of a new CBC morning radio show scheduled to begin Sept. 29. The program, as yet untitled, will replace This Country in the Morning and will be broadcast Monday through Friday across the country. Executive producer Ann Gibson says she and her production team plan a new theme for the show and are "working hard to bring our audience a brand new program."

NEW ORLEANS — Claudius Giesick, who admitted shoving his bride of two weeks into the path of a speeding car so he could collect her life insurance, has been given a maximum prison sentence of 21 years. "This is the most cold-blooded killing that I've seen in my entire practice of law," said Judge Rudolph Becker. Giesick said he needed the money to fight a bad cheque charge against him in Texas and for a down-payment on a house.

TORONTO (CP) — A United States psychologist said Tuesday that lie-detection machines can be confused or fooled by curling your toes. Dr. Burke Smith of Philadelphia told the Royal Commission into Metropolitan Toronto Police Practices that several other methods can be used to affect the outcome of a polygraph examination. A key factor in the use of the polygraph is a feeling of guilt in lying to a critical question and fear of the consequences of being caught, Smith said.

SAN DIEGO — If you still don't think there's a long-range shortage of gasoline approaching, take counsel from Fred Hartley. Hartley told an interviewer Tuesday that he had sold his big Detroit-made luxury car and bought a small foreign auto, although Hartley is in a much better position than most Americans to afford the bigger car. "I've gone from 6 or 8 miles per gallon to 22 miles," noted Hartley, who is chairman of the board of the Union 76 Oil Co.

ROME—Mrs. Giovanna Caratelli, 49, went to visit her two sons in prison on narcotics charges and wound up in prison herself. Guards said they caught the mother trying to pass a package of cigarettes containing hashish to her sons, through a grill at Queen of Heaven prison. She was sent to Rome's other prison, Rebibbia.

Just an Elephant Having Breakfast

SHELLEY, Idaho — Sharon Jones woke up at 4 a.m. to the sound of crunching noises in her yard and found a nine-foot-tall elephant named Susie looking through her bedroom window.

Susie, after slipping away from her circus and awakening Mrs. Jones, knocked over a lawnmower, dragged it around the yard, chewed up lawn, trees and flowers and Shelley police came to Mrs. Jones' rescue and tried to lead Susie away by a 12-foot logging chain she wore on one leg.

Instead, Susie dragged two officers across 50 yards of farmland and two trenches. fertilized the front lawn.

Police chief Reed Hayes, who missed the chase because "I stayed home in bed," said the big Indian elepham took off through a field dragging his officers

"One of the officers told me she didn't even have to work hard."

Just as it began to look as though the Shelley police department might spend all day chasing and being dragged by Susie, her trainer, Al Clark, arrived.

Clark "came up and hit her along side the head with his fist and grabbed her by the ear and led her away," according to Chief Hayes.

Susie had run away from the circus on its one-day visit to Shelley after the chain fastening slipped loose.

Despite her size, officers said damage during her unauthorized visit to Shelley and the half-hour chase with officers was minimal, confined mainly to the Jones' flowers and lawn.

Regina 'Ignored' Petition

OTTAWA (CP) — Chief Justice Bora Laskin of the Supreme Court of Canada said Tuesday that Regina city council appeared to have given "the back of its hand" to a petition signed by almost 7,500 residents.

The petition asked that a council decision to build a new city hall for about $7 million be put before electors in a plebiscite.

A legal action taken by a Regina citizens committee asking that council be ordered to call a plebiscite, rejected by the Saskatchewan Court of Appeal, now is before the Supreme Court of Canada. The appeal continues today.

The chief justice told city lawyer D. K. MacPherson that the Regina council seemed to have dug in its heels in opposition to the petition and to have said collectively "let's ignore it."

CALGARY (CP) — City council Tuesday defeated a motion to reduce Mayor Rod Sykes' salary to $9,000 from $30,000 a year.

Ald. Tom Priddle, who introduced the motion, and Ald. Don Hartman, a frequent critic of the mayor, voted in favor of the motion, while the rest of the 13-member council voted against it.

"Motions of this kind are an insult to the mayor and to the electorate," Mayor Sykes said.

Ald. Priddle contended that Sykes "is not a full-time mayor" because he has land holdings in Edmonton. Sykes said his land purchase does not constitute any conflict of interest.

CALGARY (CP) — A second man has died as a result of a 10-vehicle crash June 11 on the Highway 3 bridge crossing the Oldman River.

Kazmier Banbur, 39, of Sahaughnessy, Alta., died Mondaf in Foothills Hospital in Calgary.

A hospital official told Lethbridge police Banbur died from massive burns to most of his body. He was the driver of a gravel truck that blew a tire and burst into flames.

Half an hour after the incident, a semi-trailer truck was in collision with a pickup truck while police and tow truck drivers were working to clear the bridge. John Brians Fress of Lethbridge, the driver of the pickup truck, was killed.

SASKATOON (CP) — A third sighting of one of two children missing here since June 15 was reported Tuesday, lending support to a suggestion by Mayor Bert Sears that the children may still be in the Saskatoon area in the hands of an abductor.

A boy who attends school with 12-year-old Dahrlyne Cranfield said he saw her Monday night in a green car with large back wheels. Police did not say where the car was seen. The boy said the girl had tape over her mouth.

Missing with Dahryle is nine-year-old Robert Grubesis. A woman said she saw them being led into an alleyway by a man the afternoon of the disappearance. Another woman said she saw a girl who looked like Dahrlyne being slapped by a man Sunday in a Saskatoon shopping centre while a boy who looked like Robert was standing by.

The mayor expressed hope that a $5,000 reward being offered for information leading to discovery of the children would be increased.

EDMONTON (CP) — The Civil Services' Association of Alberta (CSA) and eight individual officers and members were fined a total of $2,800 Tuesday for being in contempt of court.

The fines were levied by the Alberta Supreme Court after a hearing on an application by University Hospital to have the association cited for contempt after the hospital's striking non-medical workers, represented by the CSA, refused to obey a June 14 court injunction ordering them back to work.

Hitch-Hiking Grandmother

WINNIPEG (CP) — Helen Fast, a 50-year-old grandmother from Abbotsford, is back on the road again in what could be her last attempt at cross-country hitch-hiking.

"My motor's shot, my transmission's gone and my gears are stripped," she quipped without showing any sign of fatigue near the half-way point of her current trip.

Mrs. Fast, who arrived in Winnipeg Monday, left Abbotsford June 10 en route to Vineland, Ont., for a visit with relatives. The trip to date has been relatively uneventful, despite the often-repeated warnings about the dangers of hitch-hiking.

"I'm trying to prove that there is nothing wrong with hitch-hiking. I want to emphasize that the majority of the world is good.

"I wouldn't hurt anyone, so why would they hurt me?"

600-Student School Plans Pass

Preliminary drawings for a school for the trainable mentally retarded have been approved by Saanich school board.

Drawings were prepared by architect Don Marshall, who was also appointed architect for the new 600-student high school to be built at Stelly's Cross Road and Wallace.

Marshall designed Parkland high school in Sidney.

The school for the retarded will be built next to Keating elementary school on Central Saanich Road.

The 3,600-square foot building, which includes two classrooms, washrooms, an activity rooms and kitchens, is expected to cost about $150,000. Also built will be a 1,000-square foot covered play area.

School board vice-chairman Lois Walsh said Tuesday retarded children from Saanich district have been going to Dogwood school in Sooke School District, but Dogwood is becoming crowded so Saanich district must provide its own facility.

About 25 children are expected to attend the new school, which should be finished by early 1976, a district official said.

Stelly's Cross Road high school will cost about $2.5 million, and target date for completion is September 1977.

The board plans to have the new high school, along with Parkland and Claremont, as the three Grade 9 through 12 schools in the district.

Parkland already has Grades 9 to 12.

Claremont has Grades 11 and 12, but in September Grade 10 students from Royal Oak junior high school will move to Claremont, and there will be five portable classrooms at the school to handle them.

Royal Oak elementary and junior high schools will combine in September into one school with kindergarten to Grade 9.

Grade 7 students from surrounding elementary schools — Lochside, Beaver Lake, and Cordova Bay — will now attend Royal Oak.

Mt. Newton junior high school will remain as it is (Grades 8-10) until the new Stelly's Cross Road school is built, when Mt. Newton will become a middle school with Grades 6-8.

TORONTO TEACHERS SETTLE FOR 40%

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto's 10,148 elementary teachers will receive a 40-per-cent wage increase plus a cost-of-living allowance under a two-year tentative agreement.

The increase will raise the average annual salary to $17,415 from $12,446 by June, 1977.

Spokesmen for the teachers, employed by Metro's six area public school boards, said detailed presentation of the proposed agreement to the teachers for ratification probably will be delayed until the fall because of some outstanding contract items. Neither side would say what the outstanding items were.

William Ross, board negotiator, said the number of Metro elementary teachers also will increase by 700 over the life of the proposed contract to enable classes to be reduced to an average of 25 pupils from 27.

Principals, who now receive an average annual wage of $22,150, will get $29,049 by the end of the contract, and vice-principals, now paid $18,850, will get $24,931.

Negotiations with Metro's 8,300 secondary school teachers are continuing.

Council Decides to Keep Lid On Firetrap Names—for Now

Victoria Fire Chief Eric Simmons will be asked to prepare for public release an updated report on fire safety deficiencies in hotels and apartments.

City council in caucus approved the action Tuesday, after a long and heated argument resulted in the decision not to release a three-year-old confidential report from Simmons on 26 buildings which do not meet building code standards.

Ald. Sam Bawlf was the only member of council insistent that the original report be made public immediately.

"If any building has been declared unsafe the people living in it should be made aware of that," he said. "It is their right to know."

But other aldermen were equally adamant that release of the report's contents would be undersirable, for fear of unnecessarily alarming tenants, conveying out-of-date information and libelling certain buildings owners.

"They (occupants of older hotels and rooming houses) probably will not sleep at night if they read this," commented Ald. Clyde Savage.

"To tell someone who has been living in a building for a number of years that it is No. 1 on the list . . ." said Ald. Murray Glazier in an unfinished sentence.

Glazier maintained that the tenants themselves must be aware of any deficiencies in their buildings, such as the lack of fire floor separation.

"What," interrupted the incredulous Bawlf. "They don't even know what that means. You guys sitting here are used to dealing with such terms, but what does it mean out there?"

Glazier pointed out that Simmons had prepared the original document as a "working paper" for exclusive and confidential use by council.

If any report were now to be issued at large, "it must be prepared by him in the full knowledge that it is a public document rather than a working document for caucus."

Ald. Mike Young, too, said he would not support the release of Simmons' original report unless he had first sought the opinion of the fire chief and of the city solicitor. But he added that there might be some advantage in publishing an updated version.

Fire prevention committee chairman, Ald. Malcolm Anderson, said he had consulted the officials that morning and they were opposed to "releasing anything indicating unsafe buildings in order of priority."

Anderson claimed the report would only worry tenants unnecessarily, and nothing would be gained by its release because "the building is still there."

"We could easily malign the owners of buildings who have made improvements (since Simmons first presented the report) or who don't agree with the comments of the fire chief," he warned.

Meanwhile Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall has asked the B.C. fire marshals office to speed up consideration of better fire safety standards.

Hall told the legislature Tuesday that because of "obvious concerns" about poor standards of downtown hotels, a series of meetings between the government and the fire marshal's office will be hastened.

Initial discussions on 40 recommendations contained in the government's study of fire fighting facilities have already taken place, said Hall, referring to a report prepared by Dr. Hugh Keenleyside.

Bodies Found

TOULOUSE, France (Reuter) — A 56-year-old doctor, his wife and their two daughters were found shot dead at their home. Police said Marcelle Boffa, 54, and her daughters Muriel, 26, and Laurence, 23, were found dead in their beds. Luc Boffa was found dead in a hallway with a rifle beside his body.

DUNCAN HOUSING

DUNCAN—The provinical government has approved a $2.5 million senior citizens' housing project here.

Tenders will be called in August for the 132-unit complex, according to Mayor Ken Paskin.

One-third of the cost will come from the province and 10 per cent from the federal government, he said.

Financial help from the two governments had been council's major worry.

The complex will be built on land adjacent to Centennial Park between Evans and First Street.

Can't End Hunger by 1985

ROME (Reuter) — The aim of banishing world hunger within a decade cannot be met, the chief of the UN Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) said today.

In an unscheduled speech to the World Food Council at its inaugural session here, Dr. Adekke Boerma became the first senior UN official to call the target unrealistic.

The aim of ending hunger in 10 years was proposed by U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger here last November at the World Food Conference. Later it was adopted unanimously as official conference policy.

Boerma told ministers from the council's 36 member countries there must be an all-out drive for economic and social development in the poorer countries so that people everywhere could afford to buy the food they needed.

But, he said, "it is clear that such a transformation cannot be brought about within the next 10 years."

Only moments before, the representative of UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim had repeated the aim of ending hunger within 10 years.

Prisoners Used Woman's Life As Bargaining Point for Drugs

VANCOUVER (CP) — An employee of the British Columbia Penitentiary said Tuesday that the life of a woman classification officer was used as a bargaining point by three prisoners for drugs supplied during a two-day siege at the penitentiary two weeks ago.

Al Hadvick, a hospital care officer, said the prisoners, who held 15 persons hostage for 41 hours in a thwarted escape attempt, used Mary Steinhauser, 32, to help them get the drugs.

She was killed by gunfire as the siege ended in the early hours of June 11 when the hostages attacked the knife-wielding prisoners and armed guards stormed the vault where the hostages were being held. One of the prisoners, Andrew Bruce, 26, was seriously injured in the ensuing gunfire.

Hadvick told a commission of inquiry into the incident that a butcher knife was thrust against Miss Steinhauser's throat in an attempt to get the first drugs supplied to the prisoners.

He told the inquiry headed by Mr. Justice J. L. Farris, that the knife was held by Bruce, who, along with Claire Wilson, 25, and Dwight Douglas Lucas, 20, threatened to kill the hostages unless demands for safe passage to an undisclosed foreign country were met.

All three prisoners were serving life sentences for murder and attempted murder.

Hadvick, who has been involved in four prisoner-hostage situations in the last 10 years, said he was returning from the prison's solitary confinement area at 8:30 a.m. June 9 when he was told that a prisoner with a knife had been seen in the classification area.

Hadvick went to the area and saw Stan Miller, the prison shop supervisor, standing by a door that opened into the room adjoining the vault, and saw Bruce inside the room with a knife at Miss Steinhauser's throat.

"Mary was in a chair," Hadvick said. "He (Bruce) had his left arm around her shoulders and his right hand was holding the knife at her throat.

"They were the only two in the office area. Lucas was peering around the corner of the vault."

Hadvick said he asked Bruce what he was doing and why.

"The gist of it was that this was his last resort; that they wanted out of the country.

"He said, 'either we live, or we die — and we'll take lots with us.' "

Hadvick said it was then that Bruce asked for a sealed vial of demerol. This request was passed to prison doctor Wally Brewster and the demerol was delivered, he added.

Hadvick said he offered to administer the drug but Bruce "flew into a rage and asked if one vial of demerol was worth one hostage's life, and he grabbed Mary's chin."

Hadvick said the prisoners were subsequently provided with drugs on demand and the drugs cause them to slacken their watch on the hostages on several occasions.

U.S. ARMS SALE TOTALLED $6.3B

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has sold more than $6.3 billion in military weapons to foreign nations over the past 11 months — with Iran and Saudi Arabia the biggest customers.

According to a Pentagon report, $4.7 billion of the total sales of military arms went to countries in the Middle East. Other big buyers were West Germany, South Korea and Greece.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, (D-Wis.) made public the figures from the Defence Security Assistance Agency and estimated Tuesday that weapons sales to 71 countries for fiscal 1975 would total more than $6.6 billion.

"No one can say for certain what impact this massive and continuing infusion of arms will have," Nelson said in a speech prepared for the senate floor. "But one thing is certain.

"Congress should have the opportunity to consider in advance sales such as these, which have wide-ranging implications for U.S. commitments and U.S. foreign policy."

DENVER DRAWS LOCAL AA

About 40 members of Alcoholics Anonymous from 35 groups in Greater Victoria will attend the 40th anniversary convention of the international organization in Denver July 4-6.

Members of the fellowship and its affiliated organizations, Al Anon for the families and friends of alcoholics and Alateen for their children, will be among 15,000 present at Denver.

AA was organized 40 years ago when Robert Smith, a doctor, and William Wilson, a stockbroker, got together in Akron, Ohio, to share their experiences as drunks and seek a way to recover from their illness.

Today there are more than 800,000 AA members around the world. Only requirement for membership is a desire to stop drinking.

Vancouver Police Probe 2 Killings

VANCOUVER (CP) — Detectives were investigating murders of two women whose bodies were found early today in different parts of the city.

One, a 43-year-old wife and mother from Vancouver apparently was the victim of a sex crime. She was found in her car in Eaton's underground parking lot at Georgia and Howe, about 3:15 a.m.

The other victim, an elderly woman, was found sprawled on the stairway near the third floor landing of the Strand Rooming House, 31 West Hastings. She was found about 4 a.m.

Police said the murders are not related.

No motive had been found for the murder of the elderly woman. However, a suspect, a man about 40, was taken from the rooming house by detectives and brought to police headquarters for a blood-alcohol test and questioning.

Detectives said the apparent sex attack has the same earmarks as the May 21 attack of a woman who was sexually assaulted during mid-day in her car in the Bay parkade at Richards and Dunsmuir.

In that case, the man escaped after forcing the 41-year-old housewife to perform indecent acts.

Two other similar attacks in underground parking lots took place earlier in the year.

3 Sisters Top Awards

In senior awards, Ryan Thibadeau received the Student Cup and, along with Wendy Dalsin, was named top citizen.

Denise Chow received the Aubrey Humanitarian Award and Dale Davies the Willway Service Award. Howard Stashewsky was awarded for sportsmanship.

Driver Jumps To Safety

The collision at the junction of Highway 2A and 12 20 miles north of Red Deer occurred when a semi-trailer truck stalled on the tracks.

The accident occurred 3½ hours after the line was reopened at 8 a.m., Tuesday, following a collision Monday night between a CP dayliner and a gravel truck at a level crossing near Red Deer.

Sara Lee Round Chocolate Layer Cake is made lavish with 3 scrumptious layers of chocolate cake separated by mounds of chocolate filling and topping that's loaded with lots and lots of real whipped cream.

What's a strawberry cake without lots of real strawberries? Nothing. And that's why we use plenty of succulent, fresh-frozen strawberries to make a Strawberry Layer Cake so good, it's summer with every bite.

No icing. Just the very best Pound Cake. It takes fresh whole eggs, first grade butter and whole milk to bake a Pound Cake like Sara Lee's.

Walnuts, lots of gorgeous walnuts. Fresh eggs, fresh milk and layer upon layer of light lovely cake and creamy topping made with lots of honest-to-goodness whipped cream are what make Sara Lee Round Layer Walnut Cake so special.

Yanks Take AL Lead

By The Associated Press

Jim (Catfish) Hunter, who was supposed to pitch New York Yankees into first place, finally did it Tuesday night.

Hunter checked Baltimore on four hits two in the first inning, two in the ninth—and the Yankees beat the Orioles 3-1 in a baseball-beanball duel.

Coupled with Boston's 8-6 loss to Cleveland Indians, the Yankees climbed into first place in the American League's East Division by one-half game, ending the Red Sox' month-long stay at the top.

In other American League action, Milwaukee Brewers swept a doubleheader from Detroit Tigers 5-0 and 4-2, Oakland A's edged Minnesota Twins 6-4, Kansas City Royals defeated California Angels 5-3 in 11 innings and Chicago White Sox beat Texas Rangers 7-5.

The only Baltimore run off Hunter was Ken Singleton's lead-off homer in the first inning. The Yankees tied it in the second against Mike Torrez on a hit batsman and singles by Graig Nettles and Terry Whitfield. They scored two in the fourth on singles by Thurman Munson, Chris Chambliss and Nettles and Whitfield's sacrifice fly.

The beanball fuss began when Torrez clipped Munson with a pitch in the second inning. Hunter nicked Elrod Hendricks in the bottom of the second and zeroed in on Bobby Grich in the sixth after a Torrez pitch came close to Munson in the top of the inning.

The rival managers were warned by umpire Nick Bremigan after Hunter nicked Grich and both benches emptied briefly in the eighth when Munson charged Torrez after grounding out. No punches were landed.

George Hendrick led Cleveland with two home runs. His second one was a two-out, three-run shot in the ninth inning. It came after Carl Yastrzemski, playing the outfield for the first time in almost a year, hit a two-run homer in the eighth to put Boston on top 6-4. Hendrick, who tagged Bill Lee for a first-inning homer, connected off Dick Drago in the ninth. Charlie Spikes also homered for Cleveland.

Milwaukee's George Scott, who homered earlier, hit a tie-breaking two-run single to cap a three-run seventh inning in the nightcap as Bill Travers scattered eight hits for his first complete game in the majors. Jim Slaton fired a three-hitter for his second consecutive shutout and third straight victory in the opener.

In the National League Philadelphia Phillies moved to within two games of the Pittsburgh Pirates in the East by winning two games from the Pirates 6-3 and 8-1. The winning pitchers were Larry Christenson and Tom Underwood.

RAISE IN PRIZE SCALE FOR AMATEUR GOLFERS

TORONTO (CP) — Amateur golfers in Canada will now be able to win a total of $250 in retail value of prizes in a tournament before losing their amateur status, the Royal Canadian Golf Association has announced.

The RCGA executive committee approved the change, effective July 1, after the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews and the United States Golf Association did the same.

The RCGA stressed, however, that prize money for amateur golfers in any amount is not acceptable and that any attempt to win prize money will continue to be regarded as a violation of the definition of an amateur golfer.

Clausewitz Pulled From Queen's Plate

TORONTO (CP) — One of the leading contenders for Saturday's Queen's Plate was scratched Tuesday while time is running out for another in the countdown to Canada's premier event for three-year-old thoroughbreds.

Clausewitz, undefeated in four races this year, was withdrawn Tuesday by trainer Roger Attfield because of chronically sore shins and a tendon strain that did not respond to treatment.

Hagelin, a winner of one division of the Plate Trial last weekend was another questionable starter with a bruised heel.

"It's a thing that is not serious," trainer Gil Rowntree said of Hagelin's bruise. "But it takes time and we don't have much."

Entries for Saturday's 1¼-mile event will be made Thursday morning at Woodbine race track with the draw for post positions to follow.

Attfield, who trains Clausewitz for owners Charles Baker and Charles Rathgeb of Toronto, said the horse had been in training but he finally decided there was too much danger of a serious injury if he ran him in the Plate.

Rontree said he has been training the horse by swimming in a large pool instead of running him on the track.

If Hagelin drops out, it would leave Preston Gilbride's Greek Answer and J. Louis Levesque's L'Enjoleur as the top contenders.

Greek Answer, a front-runner, won the other division of the Plate Trial at 1 1-16 miles but there is some question whether he could handle the Plate distance.

L'Enjoleur, to be ridden Saturday by Canadian champion jockey Sandy Hawley, won eight of 15 races as a two-year-old but has been inconsistent this year.

Other likely entries include Mystery Time, Countryman, Upper Shelf, Dan's Commander, Near the High Sea, Brilliant Sunday, Trusted Friend, Rex Favor, Fly The Ensign and Belonger.

Two-Day Test For Golf Vets

Titles are destined to change hands this week when members of the Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf Association stage their annual 36-hole championship tournament.

Gordon Millin, last year's champion, and Don McCormick, winner of the handicap crown, are both scheduled to be in Spokane for the four-day Pacific Northwest Golf Association seniors' tourney which will conclude Friday.

The Island seniors will also complete play Friday at Glen Meadows after opening their tournament Thursday at the Royal Colwood course.

Entered in the Island event are 168 fairway veterans, who will start on both days at the following tees and times:

Cardinals Claim Hahn on Waivers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Padres claimed veteran outfielder Don Hahn from St. Louis Cardinals on waivers Tuesday and optioned outfielder John Scott to Alexandria. Hahn, 26, played for Montreal Expos in 1969-70 and New York Mets in 1971-74. Last winter he was traded to Philadelphia and then to St. Louis. His lifetime batting average is .238.

Knowledge and understanding of the conformation of horses is most necessary for everyone who rides, trains or intends at any time to purchase a horse.

Enough knowledge to recognize what is referred to as "quality" as opposed to coarseness, to be able to recognize defects in the bone structure both of body and limbs, to be able to see where a shortage is compensated by an excess is a must for all who would aspire to become aknowledgeable horse-person.

A few tips from an expert will enable anyone to begin to acquire an "eye for a horse."

The word conformation as applied to horses is often wrongly used. For instance an animal that has lots of spirit, and shows it will often be described as being of "good conformation" when upon study it will prove to have many conformation defects.

Conformation in a horse reflects "form to function." If a machine is not engineered accurately it will not function at top performance. Likewise a horse of poor conformation will not be able to perform well and continue to do so.

Irrespective of the lineage of any horse being observed for conformation the one making the inspection should look first for the good points the animal has to offer.

First the head. It should be pleasing to look at, have eyes wide apart and generous nostrils. The neck should be long and have a crest (arch) with the head attached at a pleasing angle.

The crest starting behind the ears should continue into the withers which should not be heavily muscled and the shoulders clearly defined.

From the wither the back should be short and broad over the loins terminating at the croup which should be relatively flat with the tail set fairly high. From the ears to the tail is known for conformation purposes as the "top line." The "top line" should be three pleasing curves from the ears to the wither, to the croup, to the tail.

Standing back a little from the animal under inspection the front legs should be straight from the ankles up with the lower pasterns somewhat slanting and the ankle to the knee-bone short.

The hind legs should again be straight up from the ankles with the pasterns sloping and a slight curve forwards from the hocks to the stifle.

Viewed from the front the chest should be wide and deep from the wither to the bottom of the body which allows lots of room for heart and lungs. Observed from behind the points of the hips should be wide apart and the general appearance of the hind quarters large and muscular. The hind legs should be vertical with a straight line from the middle of each foot going right up through the points of the hock to the middle of the "hams."

Any suggestion of crookedness in this line is an apparent weakness. Suitably sized feet with larger rather than smaller being more desirable, according to the size of the horse.

Don't let color bias you. A good horse is any color.

Don't let an animal with lots of tail, mane and a shiny coat impress you falsely. It may have beauty but no substance.

Don't let pedigree influence you. Even the best of parents produce "misfits" in the horse world.

Don't let first impressions dominate. It's the second look that may change your mind.

Don't be discouraged if the next judge you watch doesn't use the animals you choose. He is in a better position to see than you are out on the rail.

But then again perhaps he didn't do his homework and you did.

Victoria riders picked up prizes in both class events and games at the recent Sooke Saddle Club open horse show.

Over-all junior winners were Heather Anderson and Julie Ruttan who tied for point scores. The trophy was awarded to Anderson who had more first and second wins.

Games included pole-bending, sack and balloon races, pin the tail on the donkey and barrel races, judged by Don Alexander.

National Capital Region Study Backed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons approved a motion Monday establishing a joint Senate-Commons committee to make recommendations on a national capital belonging to all Canadians.

The committee will undertake the first parliamentary study of the 1,800-square-mile national capital region since 1956.

The national capital commission (NCC) which looks after federal interests in the Ontario and Quebec sides of the region was established after the 1956 study.

The proposed study received all-party support.

Before The Judge

A 24-year-old man facing a rape charge was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $5,000 when he appeared in Victoria provincial court Tuesday.

Robert Garrick Schoeman was committed by the court Jan. 30 to Riverview Mental Hospital in Coquitlam for treatment. Doctors at the hospital now find him fit to stand trial.

He is facing three counts of common assault involving three women and one charge of rape. Police allege that all four incidents occurred between 2:45 and 5:35 p.m. Jan. 216.

Conditions of his release are that he report weekly to the probation office, reside with his parents at 2202 Bilston, continue with medication and abide by a 10 p.m. curfew.

Schoeman will appear again July 2 for election and plea.

A no-publication order on bail proceedings was granted by Judge Douglas Campbell at defence lawyer Michael Hutchison's request.

Ronald Clifford Metcalfe, 18, was sentenced to an additional two months in jail after he pleaded guilty to escaping from Jordan River forestry camp May 19. He was not caught by police until a month after his escape.

Prosecutor Nicholas Lang said Metcalfe was serving a five-month sentence levied April 28 for breaking and entering and theft.

"While at Jordan River, homosexual advances were made upon him by other inmates," said Michael Ellis, defence lawyer for Christopher Ingalls.

Ellis said Ingalls, who pleaded guilty to escaping from Jordan River, left the camp because he was afraid to inform the authorities of the inmates' advances.

He was arrested 24 hours after his escape May 31.

Ingalls, 17, was serving a four-month jail term for theft May 2.

Five additional days were added to this sentence for the escape. Campbell granted Ellis' request that the remainder of Ingalls' sentence be served in an institution other than Jordan River.

A 24-year-old woman, who said she had come from Italy to look for work, was sentenced to seven days in jail and placed on one-month probation after she pleaded guilty to obtaining lodgings by fraud.

Lang said Tiffany Jones checked into James Bay Inn, 270 Government Street, on June 15 and left five days later without paying the bill of $88.20.

"You seem very flippant about the offence ... you came here with money, ran out, then went and defrauded a hotel," Campbell said. "Do you realize the seriousness of the charge?"

"Well, I can't cry about it now it's done," Jones said.

When the judge asked Jones how she intended to support herself, she said: "I heard that you can get welfare in Canada if you can't find a job."

Campbell decided on the jail term because of her attitude and full intent to commit the offence.

Norman Ross Fisher, 19, of 617 Pine, who pleaded guilty to breach of probation, was given what Campbell called "one last chance."

Lang said Fisher was fined and put on probation for two years Dec. 28, 1973, for three traffic offences including impaired driving and driving while his licence was suspended. Since then, Fisher had four more suspended-licence convictions and one more impaired driving.

The prosecutor urged a jail term but Campbell decided to take a chance and impose a suspended sentence.

In traffic court, Judge Harold Alder sentenced James Cecil Hall, 46, of 121 Rendall, to three months in jail, followed by a one-year term of probation. Hall had pleaded guilty June 2 to impaired driving and refusal to take a breath-analysis test Feb. 12.

In traffic court Monday, Judge Harold Alder sentenced James Cecil Hall, 46, of 121 Rendall, to three months in jail, followed by a one-year term of probation. Hall had pleaded guilty June 2 to impaired driving and refusal to take a breath-analysis test Feb. 12.

Deirdre Smith, 43, of 2471 Beach Drive, was found guilty of impaired driving and fined $100 by Judge Alder. She was also placed on one-year probation term, prohibited from driving for a year and ordered to take the impaired driver's course.

TEEN ACTIVITIES SET IN SIDNEY

An activity group for teenagers in Sidney is offering a program through July and August which includes hiking and camping trips, sailing and tennis instruction, arts and crafts.

The Sidney Teen Activity Group is for 13 to 18-year-olds and is supported by grants from the federal government, Sidney and North Saanich. There will be a minimal charge for activities such as tennis, sailing and crafts.

The outdoor program includes back-packing trips through the Sooke hills, camping out at Sidney Spit, hiking the West Coast Trail and bike camping trips through the Gulf Islands.

The indoor programs will be centred at Parklands School Monday to Friday from 1 to 4 p.m. and at the Sanscha clubhouse, Monday to Saturday evenings from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m.

Arts and crafts activities include batik, spinning, use of natural dyes, ceramics and sculpting.

More information on the summer program can be obtained by phoning 656-6622.

Slide Risk Low

SEATTLE (AP) — The betting line on a mudslide from increasingly-active Mt. Baker reaching popular recreation areas now is about 100 to 1, the United States geological survey said Tuesday.

The hazard estimate was made at the request of Puget Power and Washington State, the survey said, "to provide a basis for contingency planning."

The survey said it was impossible to forecast whether Baker's increased steam activity would lead to an eruption. But the agency said geological evidence shows mud slides from the northwest Washington volcano have travelled eight or more miles at least 10 times in the last 10,000 years.

"The situation up there has not become any more urgent just recently," said Dr. Dwight Crandell of Denver, the survey's leading expert on volcanos in the Cascade Mountains. "It's just that with increased use of the area, some decisions have to be made."

Greenpeace Tails Whalers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace V, one of two ships in the Greenpeace foundation's anti-whaling mission was sailing through choppy seas off the Western U.S. coast Tuesday in pursuit of a Russian whaling fleet.

The Greenpeace organization hopes to contact the Japanese and Russian whaling fleets and prevent them from killing whales.

The 80-foot Greenpeace vessel sighted the fleet Friday and has been try nigto pinpoint the Russian operation ever since.

Rob Marining, foundation vice-president, said here Tuesday the Greenpeace was within 50 miles of both the fleet's mother ship and its chaser vessel.

He said the ship's crew hopes to close in soon and begin monitoring the Russianwhaling operation.

The Greenpeace manoeuvred towards what appeared to be a supply ship Saturday, but the Russians spotted it and steamed away fill speed, Marining said.

Refreezing Reassessed

NEW YORK (NYT) — When frozen foods first came on the market, consumers were told that they should never, under any circumstances, refreeze them. No reason was given, but the notion got around that something dire, such as food poisoning, could occur.

Now word comes from Dr. Walter A. Maclinn, acting director of Rutgers University's food science department and its experiment station, that this was only a good marketing device; it was not a necessary safety measure. Other authorities now are taking a somewhat similar view on refreezing.

What the food processors once were after, according to Maclin, was quality control of their products and, by merely putting "not to be refrozen" on the packages, they got consumers to collaborate.

The first to use the line, again according to Maclinn, was Clarence Birdseye, who pioneered in the fast freezing of foods.

"Rapid freezing produces small ice crystals that don't interfere with food texture as much as the large crystals that form when foods freeze more slowly," said Maclinn, "and Birdseye didn't want people to buy his products, thaw and refreeze them more slowly at home, and then decide that Birdseye products weren't any good."

Those who followed Birdseye into the frozen food business then put some variation of "don't refreeze" on their packages.

According to Maclinn, this hasn't been stressed for a good many years. "You don't see many such signs these days," he said. But not many people seem to have noticed their absence: The same thinking about refreezing has continued.

Now, however, Maclinn is coming right out and saying that if foods are still partly frozen, "just refreeze them; they may lose some quality, but they're safe to eat."

Then, going beyond the "partly frozen" qualification, he said, "Thawed foods that seem edible in looks and odor can safely be refrozen."

But, he added, "it's wise, though, to reshuffle the packages so that air can circulate around them and remove the heat quickly."

Other authorities are also taking this relaxed attitude.

One who does is Dr. D. G. Gaudagni, research chemist with the U.S. department of agriculture in Berkeley, Calif., who has spent at least 12 years studying the effects of freezing, unfreezing and refreezing.

Gaudagni believes that fruits and vegetables may be refrozen more than once. "If the package gets soft once or twice, it shouldn't matter," he said. "Actually, it could get soft several times but it might not taste as well."

Chops Sauced with Ripe Olives

A piquant lemony-flavored ripe olive sauce turns ordinary braised pork chops into a festive dinner. Lemon and onion slices and whole black ripe olives are attractive on the sauced chops.

The sauce is a flavorful blend of orange juice, lemon juice and sherry. The resulting sweet and sour taste compliments pork chops deliciously.

PIQUANT-SAUCED PORK CHOPS

(Makes 4 servings)

4 loin pork chops, 1-in. thick (about 2 lbs.)
1 medium-size lemon
¾ cup orange juice
¾ cup sherry
1 teaspoon brown sugar (packed)
¾ teaspoon salt
1 medium-size clove garlic, pressed
¼ teaspoon white pepper
¾ cup canned pitted California ripe olives, drained
1 small onion, sliced (½ cup)
½ teaspoon cornstarch

Trim fat from chops, and render trimmings in a 10-inch skillet. Remove trimmings. Brown pork chops slowly on one side in the fat. While meat is browning, cut 4 thin slices from lemon and squeeze juice from the rest to measure 1 tablespoon. Combine the juice with orange juice, sherry, brown sugar, salt, garlic and pepper. Turn meat and top each chop with a lemon slice. Sprinkle olives and onion over chops. Pour orange-sherry mixture over, and heat to boiling. Cover, turn heat low and simmer 25 to 30 minutes, until chops are tender. Remove meat to heated serving platter. Skim off and discard any excess fat from surface of sauce. Boil olive sauce rapidly until reduced to about 1 cup. Mix cornstarch with ½ teaspoon water, stir into the sauce. Cook, stirring, until slightly thickened. Pour over chops, and serve at once.

Beef A La Lindstrom

(Serves 4 to 6)

1 pound extra lean ground beef
4 egg yolks
½ cup half and half
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 cup mashed potatoes
4 tablespoons minced beets
2 tablespoons capers
White pepper and salt to taste
2 to 3 tablespoons butter

Combine all ingredients but butter and shape into patties, hamburger style. Heat butter in heavy skillet. Fry patties very quickly in hot butter so that they remain very rare on the inside.

LEFTOVERS BASIC TO ROGUE'S BIGOS

Serves 4 to 6.
2 pounds Sauerkraut
1 medium Onion
1 to 2 pounds leftover cooked meats (a variety of meats, poultry and sausages may be combined.) 1 10½-ounce can jellied Consomme
Gelatin from canned ham (optional)
Salt and pepper
Lemon juice and dry red wine to taste (optional)
¼ cup lard (or margarine)
2½ teaspoons flour
½ to 1 cup Madeira wine.

Prepare sauerkraut. Chop into smaller pieces with a cook's knife, put in pan, add 1 can undiluted jellied consomme, the leftover gelatine from canned ham and enough water to simmer without burning.

Simmer uncovered for 1½ hours until cabbage is soft, replacing water as necessary or adding dry red wine. Make a roux of lard, or margarine, chopped onion and flour. Mix in with sauerkraut. The mixture should be farly sour. If it is not, add lemon and wine. If too sour, add a little sugar.

Dice leftover meats and mix in with salt and pepper to taste and return to a medium flame. Heat throughout with constant stirring. When meat is hot add Madeira to taste, stir in and serve very hot.

Guide to Boost Nutrition Value

HILDA BEASTALL

Every Canadian responsible for preparing meals, whether for one person or for public serving in schools, business cafeterias, or nursing homes, should study the chart named "Nutrient Value of Some Common Foods." This alone will not guarantee nutritious meals, but it is an aid in selecting ingredients to boost nutrition values in lower priced meals.

The chart is available free from either the Department of National Health and Welfare at Ottawa, or locally from Nutrition Service, Dept. Health Services, Victoria.

As an example we see the comparative nutrient values of brown rice and white rice, noting that the brown wins by a small margin in each of many nutrients. Even brown rice, however, is not high in protein by itself nor is it a complete protein, so that it needs boosting if we want to use it in a meatless meal.

From other sources we find brown rice combines with wheat, soybeans and other dry beans, and raw peanuts to give exceptionally high quality protein.

Rice and milk or milk products which include various cheeses, skim milk powder, yogurt, cottage cheese also furnish good protein; rice with peas or beans (legumes); rice with brewer's yeast and eggs; apart from good protein values, other vitamins and minerals are present abundantly in these foods.

These combinations emphasize variety, and variety is desirable not only from the aesthetic points of taste and appearance in our meals, but is also a necessity if we are to remain healthy.

The human system requires a variety of foods, the reason being perhaps that "civilization" has dulled the sharp edge of instinct. We have too many foods from which to select; we are not too sure what nutrition we are getting from some of these foods.

On top of all this we undoubtedly like to enjoy the element of surprise in our meals and they are a sociable time in some homes still. So we'll settle for variety plus food values, cooked and served to be attractive to our senses.

One more word on rice all the recipes given here are for brown short grain rice. It is no longer cheap except in comparison with other less nutritious foods.

RICE WITH PEAS

1 small sweet onion
2 Tbsp fresh parsley, chervil, thyme
3 Tbsp soft margarine or soy oil
5 cups hot water or vegetable stock
1½ cups raw brown rice
½ tsp salt
1 cup fresh (or frozen) green peas
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese
1 Tbsp brewer's yeast

Slice onion and chop the green herbs; add to margarine or oil heating in a pan having a lid. Cook gently until soft.

Add the raw rice and half the water (or vegetable stock), bring to boil. Put lid on and simmer 15 minutes, adding remainder of liquid as needed. Salt lightly. Bring again to boil.

BAKED HERBED RICE WITH MUSHROOMS

2 cups cooked brown rice
1 small sweet onion, chopped
1 cup chopped fresh parsley, spinach, lettuce and a little mint, sweet basil
1 cup diced brown mushrooms
1 cup milk from powdered skim
2 small eggs, beaten
½ tsp. salt
¼ cup soft margarine or oil

Heat oven to warm, 163 degs. Celsius. Grease an oven casserole having a cover.

Mix ingredients in order in casserole; spread soft margarine over the top. Bring to heating point on top of stove to reduce length of oven heat time if this is convenient.

Bake for about 1 hour, removing lid for last 15 minutes to brown a little if not already coloring well.

Serve with either heated canned tomatoes or a big serving of sliced young carrots cooked briefly, sprinkled with parsley. Serves 4.

Now here is something different to do with rice. Make this in the following small quantity for 2 servings to see how you like it and what herbs you wish to add for more seasoning.

SAVORY RICE ON WHEAT BUNS

½ small onion, thinly sliced
¼ cup ground raw unsalted peanuts
2 Tbsp soft margarine
½ cup raw brown rice
¼ tsp salt
2 cups vegetable stock
1 Tbsp currants
2 tsp brewer's yeast*

Cook sliced onion and chopped raw peanuts for a few minutes in margarine in a saucepan until onion is soft and yellow.

Remove nuts and onions and keep warm. Add raw rice to the margarine. Stir and cook for few minutes until it begins to brown. Add salt sparingly.

Toast the homemade wholewheat buns lightly if you like, spread with soft margarine, serve the Savory Rice mixture on top.

Cooked brown rice mixed with homemade yogurt, herbs and young raw vegetables makes a nutritious and different salad for warm days. This mixing and matching of several foods makes possible the variety needed in limited budget meals.

Cassata Napolitana

Serve cassata napolitana to your family or friends on a warm summer evening. It is layered with ice cream and crisp wafers and can be prepared with little time and effort.

28 wafers
1 pint vanilla ice cream, softened
¼ cup toasted slivered almonds, finely chopped
2 tablespoons white rum
1 pint strawberry ice cream, softened
¼ cup milk
1 pint pistachio ice cream, softened
Whipped cream, optional
Maraschino cherries, optional.

Line bottom and sides of a 10¼ x 3⅜ x 2⅝-inch loaf pan with aluminum foil. Place 8 wafers in an overlapping row in bottom of pan. Mix vanilla ice cream with next two ingredients. Spoon over cookies in pan, spreading evenly. Top with 10 wafers, in overlapping rows. Mix strawberry ice cream with 2 tablespoons milk. Spoon over cookies; then top with remaining cookies. Mix pistachio ice cream with remaining milk. Spoon over cookies, spreading evenly. Cover and freeze at least 5 hours, or until firm. To serve, turn out of pan and peel off aluminum foil. Garnish with rosettes of whipped cream and cherries, if desired. Makes 14 (about ¾-inch) slices.

Vegetables With Chicken

Serves 6

3 tbsp. flour
¼ tsp. pepper
3-lb. fryer, cut up
1 tbsp. vegetable oil
1 cup fresh mushrooms, sliced
½ cup green pepper, cubed
2 tbsp. parsley, minced
1 cup boiling water
½ cup fresh peas.

Combine flour and pepper in paper bag; add chicken pieces and shake well.

Brown chicken in oil in heavy skillet. Place browned pieces in a casserole.

Put mushrooms, green pepper, and parsley into same frying pan and cook only until mushrooms are browned then place in casserole with chicken. Springle with salt and seasoned pepper.

Add 1 cup hot water. Cover.

Lemon Pickles

3 large green cucumbers or 6 zucchini squash

1 medium green pepper, finely chopped

1 tablespoon salt

2 teaspoons celery seed

¾ cup sugar

½ cup fresh squeezed lemon juice

1 lemon, thinly sliced into half cartwheels.

Cut unpeeled cucumbers or zucchini squash into slices about 1-16th inch thick. Combine with green pepper, onion, salt and celery seed in large bowl. Mix gently and let stand 1 hour at room temperature. Combine sugar with lemon juice and stir to dissolve sugar. Pour over vegetables; add lemon slices and stir to blend. Cover and refrigerate 24 hours. These pickles will keep 3 weeks when stored, uncovered, in the refrigerator. Makes about 5 cups.

A CHILD LEARNS TO SWIM

This is the last of 10 lessons in which your child has learned to swim.

You've brought him from the simple exercise of getting used to water splashed on his face to the point he only has to learn to co-ordinate his arms, legs and breathing to be an accomplished swimmer.

In waist-deep water show him how to push off towards the shore or poolside, arms stretched in front, head down. Now kick your legs, then start to move your arms. You'll have to come up for breath after a few seconds but keep repeating it with the child beside you doing the same thing.

Show him how to turn his head to the side enough that his mouth will be out of water so he can take a quick breath. Have him turn his head to the right as the right arm is under water and the right shoulder back from his head.

Mastering this co-ordination is going to take time and not a little frustration. However, he now knows all the motions and it's just a question of putting them all together in a smooth operation.

He's a swimmer! In 10 short lessons your child has progressed from imitating Freddie Frog and is now at home in the water, enjoying every second with a sense of accomplishment.

You're tired but sure you have an Olympic champion in the family.

LAST AND MOST IMPORTANT: Impress on your youngster that the strongest swimmers always have someone swimming with them. It's called the "buddy system."

Would you like to have reprints of all 10 lessons? Send $1 and a large self-addressed envelope to A Child Learns to Swim, c-o this newspaper, Box 4090, Station A, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

Don't Pass Up Wings

TINY BENNETT

Recently I bought chicken wings at 39 cents a pound — a very good buy indeed, since these delicious chicken parts usually sell for around 59 cents a pound.

Yet most people were passing up the wings in favor of the cut chicken, the most expensive way to buy this popular meat. When I began to pile big bags of the wings into my shopping basket, I was asked if I had a special recipe for them. The question rather surprised me.

Sure I've got special recipes for chicken wings but who needs some fancy way to prepare them?

You can take a bunch of wings costing about one dollar — about 2½ pounds turn out a delicious entree and get a couple of quarts of superb soup stock as an added bonus.

In fact, that's exactly what I did.

The wings were frozen, so without defrosting, I took them out of the bag, dumped them in a big pot, covered with hot water from the tap, heated this up at low heat until the frozen hunk melted and then added one onion spiked with two whole cloves, one carrot, one stick of celery, six whole peppercorns, two teaspoons salt, dash of thyme, dried parsley and summer savory. As it all came to the low boil, I skimmed off and threw away the risen foam.

When the pot cleared and no more foam popped up, I covered and simmered as gently as possible, testing from time to time until the wings reached the point when the meat slipped easily from the bones. This took a little over half an hour.

Using a big strainer, I emptied the pot, catching all the liquid in a bowl. After cleaning the pot, it went back on the stove with the strained liquor and the vegetables. And the wings were spread out to cool to a point where I could handle them.

Boning wings is a bit of a fiddling task and best done with the fingers. The upper part of the wing has one bone, the middle-section two and the tips which have little meat, are tossed right back into the pot along with the bare bones removed from the wings.

There are tiny gristle sockets that have to be pulled out and these too go back into the stockpot. This leaves one with a pretty big wad of boneless and delicate chicken meat, plus about three quarts of slowly simmering stock extracting the last piece of goodness from bones and wingtips.

At this stage I taste the stock, add two chicken cubes, another onion, carrot and stick of celery, a little thyme, summer savory, dried parsley and a smidgin of dried tarragon; no more salt at this stage. Set out of the way on a low heat ring at the back of the stove, this is allowed to simmer slowly for several hours. It is then strained, bones and used vegetables discarded, all fat skimmed off and then carefully strained again through several thicknesses of cheese cloth.

The stock is now rich enough to use as chicken soup and can be seasoned to taste. It's your choice whether you serve it plain, with rice, noodles, fresh (frozen) peas with mint, finely chopped and gently simmered celery, or chopped asparagus tips.

The meat from the wings can be used for chicken pot pies, chicken salads, curry dishes, Chinese dishes and a score or more quick-to-fix entrees.

A favorite chicken wing dish I often cook is oven fried wings, using the two upper parts intact and tossing the tips into my stock pot. This is a fast preparation dish that takes less than 45 minutes from start to serving.

OVEN FRIED WINGS

Coat an oven-proof baking dish with the fat of your choice — butter, lard, or shortening — put in the wings, sprinkle with salt, pepper, dash of thyme, parsley, savory and lightly sprinkle with flour. Dash over the top a light dressing of sweet powdered paprika and put on a rack set high in a pre-heated 425 degree F oven.

After 15 minutes, turn the wings, repeat the seasoning — lighter this time — and return to the oven. Turn after 10 minutes, prop open the oven, turn on broiler and brown on all sides, turning constantly.

For fancy wings, dribble in a cup of white wine or half cup of dry white Vermouth, turn off all heat, shut oven door and allow to blend for a few minutes before serving. Goes well with mashed potatoes, green peas poached in chicken stock with dried mint, green beans and chicken stock gravy.

Chicken wings can be coated with seasoned flour — plain flour with the herbs and spices given above — fried crisp in a skillet, put in an oven pan and covered with fresh or canned heated pineapple chunks, with the whole dish covered by pineapple juice thickened in the skillet with ½ tablespoon corn starch seasoned with soya sauce. This makes an extra dish for a Chinese meal and can be accompanied by vegetable chop suey and plain rice.

Chicken Noodle Casserole Uplifted

By MARY MOORE

I needed a chicken with which to make a chicken salad so I bought a 5½-pound one and simmered it, used the meat I needed for my salad and had lots leftover plus all the broth. Five were coming for dinner so — put on my thinking cap. I thought of your gang and my gang and made a chicken noodle casserole with what ingredients I had on hand.

NEW CHICKEN NOODLE CASSEROLE
(Serves 5)

2 c. (generous measure) ¼" egg noodles
3 c. chicken broth
2 long slender carrots cut in ¼" slices
2 c. cut-up fresh green beans
Sliced cooked chicken equivalent of 2 breasts and 1 whole leg
2 tbsp. margarine (first amount)
2 tbsp. flour
1 tsp. salt
1½ c. fine whole wheat breadcrumbs
2 tbsp. melted margarine (second amount)

Cook the noodles until tender in the unsalted 3 cups chicken broth. Drain and reserve broth. Cook carrots and beans in minimum of water until nearly tender and reserve liquid. Add vegetable liquid to reserved chicken broth and measure. You need 2 cups. If you do not have it add more chicken broth or water to get a full 2 cups.

Tip the noodles into a medium-large shallow casserole. Cover them with the cooked vegetables. Cover then with a very generous overlapping layer of sliced cooked chicken.

Make a sauce by blending the margarine (first amount) with flour and salt and stirring in the 2 cups measured broth until thick. Pour all over chicken, easing it between the cracks to flow to bottom.

Melt the second amount of margarine and stir in crumbs with a fork. Sprinkle these all over top. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. 1 hour.

Because we had some short fat asparagus tips that my neighbor Joan had just cut on her friend's farm we used them as a green border atop the casserole.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, who is 25, is a nurse. She is engaged to a 29-year-old doctor. He is from India.

We are Irish Catholics. The young man was educated in England. He is well-mannered, quiet and from a good family (who is in India), and he plans to remain here and practice medicine.

Our problem is how our friends and relatives will react. Will they accept him? He is very dark. Will he be considered black?

Do you know what people's feeling are about white girls dating and marrying people from India? Are our friends going to look down on him?

We would like to have a nice church wedding, to which he agrees, but are people going to criticize us?

They both seem to know what they are getting into. Can you help me?

WORRIED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: If your daughter and her young man love each other and know what they are getting into, you have nothing to worry about. Whether or not he is "accepted" or considered black — or you are criticized — is beside the point. People who matter will accept him for what he is. And those who feel differently aren't worth bothering about.

DEAR ABBY: I am 10-years-old and recently heard of a new group called "Kid's Lib." Kids say that voting, drinking, smoking and many other activities should be legalized at age 13. My class talked about this and about 80 per cent said, "This is cool."

Abby, here's what I think: Kids don't have enough judgment to do any of these things until they reach 18. Even then, drinking and smoking are bad for kids, especially younger teenagers.

What do you think?

T.L. OBJECTS

DEAR T.L.: I think you'e got a good head on your 10-year-old shoulders.

DEAR ABBY: If you had a choice, would you rather have your kids hooked on drugs or alcohol? Please be honest.

SOPH

DEAR SOPH: If I had a choice, I'd rather have them hooked on nothing! Why assume kids have to be hooked on SOMETHING?

Inability to Digest Milk Sugar Common Ailment

By DR. JEAN MAYER
Professor of Nutrition,
Harvard University

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Q. Not long ago, I went to the doctor because I was suffering from a variety of abdominal symptoms, including bloating, gas and diarrhea. He diagnosed my problem as lactose intolerance and told me to cut down on the amount of milk I drink. Can you tell me a little more about this condition?

A. Although it was known early in this century that carbohydrates might cause diarrhea, it was not recognized until the late 1950's that the inability to digest milk sugar (which is called lactose intolerance) could be responsible for producing the symptoms for you describe.

Since that time, lactase deficiency — caused by inadequate amounts of the lactose-splitting enzyme, lactase, in the small intestine — has been recognized as "normal" for most people in the world. In fact, it is only the white, adult population of the northern hemisphere that seems to have plenty of lactase. In other groups, the lactase concentration, which is high during infancy, drops drastically by adulthood. Exactly who this phenomenon exists is still under study, but most research indicates that deficiency of lactase in adults is an inherited characteristic.

The symptoms of intolerance to milk, bloating, gas and diarrhea are caused by an accumulation of undigested milk sugar in the small intestine. This excess sugar causes more fluid to be drawn into the stomach and small intestine, resulting in abdominal distention, cramps and increased movement of the gastrointestinal tract.

When the undigested sugar reaches the colon, bacterial fermentation breaks down the lactose to lactic acid. The release of hydrogen and carbon dioxide in this process probably contributes to the bloating, frothy diarrhea and flatulence.

Forunately, the treatment is simple and consists of reducing milk in the diet of adolescents and adults (infants and young children usually tolerate milk without any problem) without necessarily eliminating milk entirely. (Incidentally, both yogurt and cheeses are well tolerated by individuals with lactose intolerance since these foods contain no lactose.)

Lactose intolerance is not an all-or-none phenomenon, even for adults. Many people who exhibit symptoms when given a lactose tolerance test suffer no ill effects when they drink an 8-ounce glass of milk. Milk taken at room temperature or consumed during a meal is usually better tolerated than ice cold milk or milk taken alone. Each individual must learn how much milk he can tolerate.

Q. I am about 20 pounds overweight. All week I manage to stick pretty closely to my diet, but weekends are my undoing. My husband and I like to go out to dinner, and I enjoy having a drink before the meal. Must I give up all of this, in order to lose weight?

A. No. It is hardly necessary to become a recluse in order to shed a few pounds. But some planning and a bit of caution will go a long way toward preventing the frustrating weekend setbacks many dieters experience. (These setbacks are often the result of the combination of one or more larger than normal meals together with some nibbling that the dieter may hardly be aware of.)

In the first place, plan to get some extra exercise on weekends. It will burn some of the extra calories you may take in, help tone your muscles and put you in better physical shape.

Second, whenever possible, select restaurants that do not base their reputations on gargantuan portions and calorie-packed frills. In order to keep prices within the means of more customers, some restaurants are beginning to offer smaller portions at lower prices. Thi soption is of particular advantage to dieters like yourself.

Third, use the same guidelines in selecting your restaurant menu that you use in planning your meals at home. Choose simply prepared fish or chicken instead of fried food or fatty cuts of beef. Order a plain potato to which you can add a small amount of butter or margarine. Ask for the salad dressing on the side. That way you can control the amount you get. And choose fruit for dessert.

As for cocktails, remember that a gin and soda with lime of a bloody Mary has far fewer calories than a drink made with a sweet mixer, such as tonic or ginger ale.

"I'm so glad you dropped by. In time for a good cup of coffee."

Today, when sensible Canadians keep careful track of the cost of everything they buy, Chase & Sanborn is still the same great coffee value.

And, in the kind of kitchens where homemade cookies still happen and good conversation is still found, Chase & Sanborn is still the really good coffee they're enjoying.

Chase & Sanborn. Ask your mother about it.

Venezuela Farmer Stung to Death

CIUDAD BOLIVAR, Venezuela (UPI)—A 58-year-old farmer was stung to death by a swarm of wasps on the outskirts of this city on the banks of the Orinoco River, authorities reported Monday.

Members of his family said Bruno Bonaccini Bartolina stumbled into a nest of wasps which stunged him repeatedly. He died before he could be given medical attention.

CONCERT WAS A BUST

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police infiltrated the crowd Monday night at the Alice Cooper concert here, bought drugs and then arrested the dealers.

It was the first time Vancouver police have infiltrated a concert crowd, and they were so pleased with their performance they plan an encore for the next concert in mid-July.

The 18 constables wandered through the crowds buying drugs. After the purchases were made, they quietly led the traffickers away to another building.

Fourteen persons were arrested for selling drugs, five of them juveniles. Most of the seizures were soft drugs, and some were nothing more than milk sugar, weeds and leaves, and sugar pills.

Meanwhile, a bandaged Alice Cooper says the show must go on.

"I'm going to try. I think I can," the singer said when asked whether he would perform as scheduled tonight in Edmonton.

"But my ribs hurt when I try to catch my breath," he added. "I tried to sing and couldn't get any volume."

DECISION

OTTAWA, JUNE 16, 1975

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission announces the following decision effective June 16, 1975.

DECISION CRTC 75-204

DUNCAN, NORTH COWICHAN, SALTAIR; QUAMICHAN AND COWICHAN DISTRICTS BRITISH COLUMBIA — 750220600

Cowichan Cablevision Ltd.

APPLICATION:

a) to acquire the assets of the cable television broadcasting undertaking serving Duncan, North Cowichan, Saltair, Quamichan and Cowichan Districts from Cowichan Valley TV Ltd. and;

b) for a broadcasting licence to continue the operation of the cable television undertaking serving Duncan, North Cowichan, Saltair, Quamichan and Cowichan Districts upon surrender of the current licence issued to Cowichan Valley TV Ltd.

—proposed installation fee: $25.00

—proposed monthly fee: $6.50

The above are maximum fees, however, the applicant proposes special fees for additional outlets (TV or FM) and bulk multiple dwellings and these are detailed in the application.

Decision: APPROVED IN PART

The Commission will issue a licence to Cowichan Cablevision Ltd. expiring March 31, 1979 subject to conditions to be specified therein, upon surrender of the current licence issued to Cowichan Valley TV Ltd.

The Commission APPROVES the proposed installation fee of $25.00. The applicant proposed a monthly subscriber fee of $6.50. The Commission considers that a monthly fee of $6.00 is adequate for the provision of cable television service in this region.

The Commission has taken particular note of the intervention filed raising concerns regarding the programming on the community channel. The Commission considers that the new licensee should recognize the important contribution made by local programming originating from and developed by the educational television co-ordinator for the Cowichan school district and the support provided by the trustees of the school board. The Commission expects that the licensee will assume the responsibility for ensuring the continuing development of this type of programming as well as the development of further local community programming which the licensee considers would be of interest to its subscribers.

In this regard, the Commission wishes to be advised of such developments and encourages all interested parties in the community to work together to ensure the continuation of a valuable service to the community.

In view of the Commission's decision to issue a new licence to Cowichan Cablevision Ltd., to serve the Duncan, North Cowichan, Saltair, Quamichan and Cowichan districts, B.C., the application (750033300) to renew the licence of Cowichan Valley TV Ltd. is denied.

DECISION CRTC 75-205

SAANICH, BRITISH COLUMBIA — 741168900

Davin Enterprises Ltd.

Application to amend its cable television broadcasting licence for Saanich, British Columbia.

— to increase its monthly fee from $4.50 (urban) and $5.00 (rural) to $6.00 (urban and rural).

The above are maximum fees, however, the applicant proposes special fees for schools, hospitals, motels, institutions and commercial establishments and these are detailed in the application.

Decision: APPROVED

In approving the proposed increase in the monthly fee to $6.00 for urban and rural dwellings, the Commission has taken into account licensee's statements on the size of the licensed area, the density, the type of homes to be served and the improvements required to be made to the broadcasting undertaking for the benefit of subscribers.

The Commission considers that while some part of the fee increase may be required for improvements and expansion of the licensee's cable television undertaking, nonetheless there is also a potential for the licensee to commence a local programming service for the benefit of the Saanich community, programming different from that presently obtained from Victoria Cablevision.

The Commission will wish to review the progress of the licensee in this regard when considering licensee's application for renewal of its cable television undertaking licence which expires September 30, 1977.

Soviets Listening In

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Soviet electronic intelligence experts can listen to telephone calls placed from offices of the highest officials in the U.S. government, including the president, the Los Angeles Times said today.

The FBI has confirmed that experts in the Russian embassy in Washington, using rooftop antennas, can eavesdrop on high-level phone conversations of U.S. officials and has been able to do so for several years, the newspaper said in a report from its Washington bureau.

The capability is "a very scary thing from an intelligence point of view," an FBI source was quoted as saying.

Tape recordings of U.S. government telephone traffic are sent to Soviet intelligence analysts in Moscow, the Times said.

"When the bureau first learned of the Soviet practice of intercepting Washington calls, it put the FBI lab to work to try to learn what kind of calls the Russians might be monitoring. It just so happened that one of the first calls the FBI intercepted was a White House conversation involving a high government official," the FBI source was quoted as saying.

He said the national security agency — the U.S. organization that carries out electronic intelligence gathering around the world — set out two years ago to find out what the Soviets could learn by monitoring microwave frequencies that now carry about 70 per cent of long-distance calls, and some cross-town calls, in the U.S. telephone network.

THIS IS A MARRIAGE THAT PASSES IN NIGHT

TORONTO (CP) — Irene MacDonald and Bruce Robinson are now married but, until the Geat Lakes shipping season ends, they can only pass like ships in the night.

The new Mrs. Robinson is the cook on the lake freighter Hilda Marjanne while her husband is an oiler on the Canadian Hunter. Both are employed by Canada Steamship lines.

The wedding took place at Rev. Siegfried Otto's Lutheran Seamen's Centre on Pier 35 at Toronto Harbor. It was the first wedding there since the centre opened 14 years ago.

When their ships tie up for the winter, the two seamen will meet at their new home in Goderich, Ont., about 70 miles north of London.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

This deal is dedicated to those bridge players who, in months and years gone by, have taken what the subsequent post-mortem analysis revealed as being an "unnecessary finesse." To these bridge players, the words of the English poet, John Donne, are directed: "Ask not for whom the bell tolls. It tolls for thee."

North-South vulnerable South deals.

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	3 ♣	3 ♦
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♠.

Three notrump would have been a superior contract, but it is difficult to see how this contract could have been arrived at after East's (out-on-a-limb) three-spade overcall.

West's opening spade lead was taken by dummy's ace, after which three rounds of trumps were played, ending up in dummy. The deuce of hearts was then led, South's jack being inserted when East followed with the four-spot. West took this trick with his queen and returned a spade to East's nine. Eventually West made his heart king, for the setting trick.

In a sense, declarer had justification in complaining of his tough luck: East, who had made a three-spade overcall, figured to possess either the queen or king of hearts. Had he had either of these cards, declarer would have lost only one heart trick. But declarer did not have to rely on luck. Proper play would have brought the contract home safely.

After capturing the opening spade lead and drawing trumps, the three top diamonds should have been cashed, eliminating diamonds from both the North and South hands. A spade would then have been led, East winning the trick.

If East now returned either a spade or a diamond, South would discard his 10 of hearts as he ruffed the trick with dummy's last trump. And if East played back a heart instead, as he surely would have done, South would play the jack, West winning with the queen.

Whatever West now returned, the defenders couldn't win any more tricks. A spade lead would be ruffed in dummy as South discarded his remaining losing heart. And a heart return instead would be captured by South's 10, for his game-going trick.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Feminine Mystique . . .

CUKURCA, Turkey (Reuter) — In this remote mountainous corner of Turkey, where women are shrouded in black from head to ankle and men sip their tea in male-only tea-houses, women's lib, it seems, has made its mark.

Just west of here, in a two-house settlement with its water mill, oxen and nut-crop, the head man, as it were, is a woman.

The unwritten rules of the unnamed riverside hamlet stipulate that no man may go to market to sell crops without her permission.

The 76-year-old woman, Aisha, is unwilling to speak to foreign reporters, but the men in her life said she rules as effectively and strictly as any man, settling family disputes, deciding on policy for sowing, harvesting and hunting and acting as the final voice on any problem.

The men of the settlement, some with shotguns and bandoliers of cartridges around their waists, were unsure how Aisha had come to power in an area where the traditional values of orthodox Islam hold sway.

Told that 1975 was women's year, one of Aisha's male underlings said without bitterness: "Here, as you can see, it is always the year of the woman."

The weather-beaten Aisha, however, is an exception to the rule in the rugged, Kurdish-dominated highlands of Turkey's Hakkari province.

Even is her own settlement, the men rapidly grew angry as a foreigner raised a camera to photograph a woman sifting wheat on the flat straw roof of one of the outbuildings.

In this village where men sport the baggy trousers and turban-like headgear of the Kurds, some women are totally veiled.

With barely translucent veils drawn over their faces, and their bodies swathed in black from head to toe, it is difficult, from a distance, to tell whether a woman is coming or going, and virtually impossible for the inexperienced eye even to guess at her proportions, age or looks.

The tiny Cayhane tea-house is a male preserve, as are similar establishments in the provincial capital, Hakkari, where womes cross the road rather than risk meeting the gaze of a foreign eye.

Technically, Turkey is a secular state where men and women enjoy equal rights, largely as a result of the reforming zeal of Mustafa Kemal Ataturk, founder of the modern Turkish republic.

Shortly after the republic was founded in 1923, Ataturk embarked on a campaign to emancipate women, publicly scorning the veil.

Gradually he introduced a non-Islamic marriage law, banning polygamy and the Islamic system of divorcing a woman simply by repudiating her.

By 1935, women had been elected to parliament, but this sense of sexual equality does not appear to have percolated through to the craggy outposts of Hakkari province.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Mike looked up from his paper. "There's a Harry Best just got married down in Duluth," he said. "Must be Bill's son. Same name, and he's 22."

"It's a long time, dear, and you've forgotten," Clare shook her head. "The boy's name was Dick, and he'd be under 20 now."

Ron had never met the Bests, but he'd been hearing about them for years. "His name was never Harry," he told his mother. "And anyway he must be at least 25 by now."

All three were wrong one way or another, but each made a correct statement about either age or name. What was the name of Bill's son?

(Answer tomorrow)

'A Miracle Is Happening' . . . Peaceful Baptiste Day Rally

MONTREAL (CP) — About 250,000 Quebecois participated in final activities of St. Jean Baptiste celebrations Tuesday, winding up what a police spokesman called the most successful and peaceful celebration in seven years.

An estimated 1.5 million people joined in the five-day event, honoring the patron saint of Quebec atop Mount Royal in the centre of the city.

No arrests were reported by police over the holiday, traditionally marred by outbreaks of violence and strong nationalist overtones.

About 60 Montreal Urban Community police were on duty on the mountain. They were there to support the organizing committee's force of 200 security men, a police spokesman said.

"A miracle is happening," said Lise Payette, a Quebec television personality and president of the organizing committee for the celebrations. The committee arranged 250 free entertainment events by more than 500 artists.

English-, Greek-, Italian- and Ukranian-speaking Quebecers joined their French compatriots in the celebrations which began Friday with singers Gilles Vigneault and Louise Forestier and comedian Yvon Dechamps.

Harmonium, Troubadou and other rock bands played to a mainly young crowd, who came for the weekend, equipped with sleeping bags, food, beer and marijuana.

The Montreal Symphony Orchestra, various jazz ensembles and choral groups played to a more varied crowd during the day.

The festivities were funded by a special lottery, La Quebecoise, reported to be so successful that a fund for next year has already been started, a spokesman said.

PENALTY CUT

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Democrats in the lower house of the California legislature have passed a bill reducing penalties for marijuana possession.

The house voted 42 to 34 Tuesday to approve lowering the punishment for possession of up to one ounce of marijuana — described as enough for 20 cigarettes — to a fine of no more than $100.

One of Six Recaptured

BAIE COMEAU, Que. (CP) — One of six prisoners who escaped Monday night from a provincial jail was recaptured Tuesday in this community as police intensified their search for the remaining suspects believed to be hiding nearby.

A Quebec Provinical Police (QPP) spokesman said early today the search, involving 40 QPP officers, has concentrated on a wooded area on the outskirts of the town where the prisoner was reeaptured.

The escapee, held on suspicion of involvement in a bank robbery in this community 225 miles northeast of Quebec City, was unarmed when recaptured and offered no resistance, the spokesman said.

Among the prisoners still at large are three men suspected of involvement in a separate bank robbery last Thursday when $1.06 million was stolen from a Bank Canadian National branch at a hydroelectric dam site 50 miles north of Baie Comeau.

IWC Delegates Turn on Israel

MEXICO CITY (AP) — More than half the delegates at the International Women's Conference walked out on Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's wife Tuesday night, as she delivered Israel's keynote address. Most of those who left were from Arab, African and Communist countries.

"We shall wait until the exodus is over," said Leah Rabin as the delegates streamed out of the conference hall.

"I know there are conflicts and misunderstandings between countries, but not even wanting to listen to each other is truly missing the objectives and goals of this convention," she said.

The walkout apparently was a rebuff to Mrs. Rabin's plea in her speech for the women's conference to "do what you can to bring us together—us, the women of Israel and our sisters of the Arab nations that surround us."

"Help us to begin to transform our individual monologues into a dialogue of mutual understanding and reconciliation."

Earlier in the conference, Mrs. Rabin said in response to a question from an interviewer that she would be glad to talk with President Anwar Sadat's wife, who headed the Egyptian delegation for the first few days of the conference. But Mrs. Sadat said she "couldn't sit down with a lady who is occupying Arab territory."

Some Arab delegations are reported trying to line up support for a conference resolution condemning Israel for its continued occupation of Arab territory. But other Third World delegates are reported to be opposed to starting a controversy so far removed from issues of women's rights.

Mrs. Rabin said the tradition of sex equality runs deep in Israel and is reflected in the country's laws and customs.

She said Israel has seen the need to give women preferential treatment to help them make their full contribution.

As an example, she cited a large number of day-care centres for children of working women.

26 Communities Face 'Disaster'

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The Minnesota Public Service Commission says some Minnesota communities may not be able to survive if Canada goes ahead with its plan to raise natural gas prices by 60 per cent.

The Canadian government announced last month that it will increase the price of natural gas exported to the United States from $1 to $1.60 per thousand feet by Nov. 1.

Director Robert Carlson of the utilities division told the national energy board in Ottawa Tuesday that 26 Minnesota communities dependent on natural gas from Canada may not be able survive the huge increase.

He said the utility concerns extend to the basic survival and social impact "of these communities who must remain competitive with their neighboring towns if they are to maintain a population base, sufficient business volume and competitive merchandising for their residents and continue to provide essential services to the agricultural communities in the surrounding area."

Carlson said the communities, including Moorhead, Bemidji and Thief River Falls, with a population exceeding 100,000, would be placed at a tremendous disadvantage with neighboring towns.

"The circumstances relating to these communities are vastly different from practically all of the United States because their import costs cannot be averaged in with domestic gas costs."

Further Aid Refused

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — The European Common Market governments refused today to increase their contributions of grain to needy countries.

The World Food Council has pledges of 8.5 million tons toward a target of 10 million. The European Commission, joint executive for the nine Common Market countries, proposed a new donation of 356,500 tons.

Officials who attended a meeting of the foreign ministers reported that West Germany and Italy opposed any increase in aid. France was said to have offered to consider one but not for this year.

The nine countries already are giving 1.28 million tons of grain this year.

Authoritative sources said the foreign ministers agreed Tuesday on the importance of giving rapid, large-scale aid to Portugal in an attempt to counter Communist pressure on the military government.

They said there was no agreement on a figure but sums as high as $1.3 billion for the next three years were mentioned. The commission is reported to have suggested an immediate grant of $520 million.

A decision on what will be offered may be made at a Common Market summit meeting scheduled in Brussels July 16-17. After that, Common Market representatives would open negotiations with the Portuguese government.

Foreign Minister Garret Fitzgerlad of Ireland, the Common Market chairman, said the member countries must help Portugal develop "along democratic lines."

Kiwanians Retain Ban On Women

ATLANTA (UPI)—Kiwanis International's annual convention voted Tuesday for the third straight year to ban women from membership in the worldwide organization and ousted two U.S. chapters which already have admitted women in violation of the group's charter.

Delegates rejected an amendment that would have allowed women to hold membership in a 3,941 to 503 vote. The amendment, sponsored by a Chicago chapter, would have modified the national charter to allow membership to "men and-or women of good character and community standing."

The Kiwanians then voted against readmitting two chapters whose charters were revoked because they have accepted women members. Results of the secret ballot were released today.

The Great Neck, N.Y., chapter sent a woman, Mrs. Carol E. Casher, to the convention to plead its case for readmittance. But her plea was rejected in a 3,800 to 482 vote.

We said: Big corporations squeeze out the little guy.

Paul Leman said:

To help business tell its story in this time of criticism and misconception, a series of interviews between freelance writer Dean Walker and the Chief Executives of major corporations has been arranged by The Investors Group, whose associated companies are shareholders in a large number of Canadian corporations. We believe this series will surprise and enlighten every Canadian.

The questions and answers have been edited, but a more complete version of this interview, and others in the series, is available by mailing the coupon below. In this interview, Dean Walker talks with Paul H. Leman, President, Alcan Aluminium Limited.

"We depend very much on small businesses to make the market."

WALKER: More and more business these days is being done by huge corporations. Isn't that squeezing out the real "private enterprisers"—the entrepreneurs with ideas, energy, fire in their bellies, and not much money?

LEMAN: I don't think so.

Large corporations are unavoidable in the basic industries today, because they need such tremendous amounts of capital and huge numbers of people to convert raw materials into metals, or energy, or plastic, or pulp. Just in doing their jobs, these companies keep growing.

Alcan, for example, is devoted, for philosophical as well as business reasons, to the use of aluminum. (It's the most abundant metal on earth, so man would be kind of stupid not to use it.) On the whole, we have stuck to our knitting and not diversified much. Yet we have grown from $1,500-million in assets in 1968 to $3,000-million today.

WALKER: Usually, when people talk of the "strengths of free enterprise", they think of the small and independent businessman. But today, private enterprise is dominated by large corporations. Do the same advantages still apply?

LEMAN: They do. Just because size is now necessary for certain products and processes, the basic principles have not been changed. At Alcan I often think, "What questions do we ask ourselves, here, that we wouldn't be asking if we were a small company trying to make headway?" And I find they are exactly the same questions: how to find new, better products; how to produce better; how to motivate employees in a genuine way.

WALKER: Does Alcan prefer to buy from small companies or large?

LEMAN: We buy on the basis of specifications, quality, and price, not by the size of the supplier. Our purchasing agents do a lot of buying from local, and sometimes small, companies that they know can supply us at reasonable quality and price.

When we make major purchases, we have to go to big people. No small company manufactures a rolling mill.

WALKER: Do you stick with suppliers you know, or do you encourage newcomers to break in?

LEMAN: If there isn't enough competition to assure us the best quality at the right price, we welcome a new entrant. But he will have to satisfy us that he will give good service. That's where the local supplier often has an advantage. He's close to our plant and knows our people and their requirements, so he can service them well. When we need seventeen pieces of steel, a shop that's two miles away will welcome the order, where the big supplier in Hamilton might not be interested.

WALKER: How about when you're selling? Do you prefer small outlets or bigger ones?

LEMAN: We don't particularly care; all customers are good. We must try to match our production capabilities to customers' demands. Some customers' orders are too small to suit the production runs of our larger mills; that's why we have distributors. There are hundreds of small companies working in aluminum today because Alcan, and other producers, are set up to supply them. We depend very much on small business to make the market.

LEMAN: We once started making aluminum homes, and found we were good at prefabricating the homes but not so good at getting them onto the lots.

The small builder has lower overheads, lower costs, can make quick decisions. He can do those things better than Alcan can. We withdrew from that business.

WALKER: Sometimes Alcan buys up small businesses. Doesn't that just put one more lively entrepreneur out of action?

LEMAN: The pattern is not always the same.

We took over a window business on the west coast sixteen years ago and its original owner, a real entrepreneur, is still running it, in very much the same style as before, but with added responsibility and resources.

There are other cases in which the owner of a business that uses aluminum has not been pushing it enough because he doesn't want to take risks. He may become involved with us to spread the risk and to help his business compete in its own field and with other materials.

WALKER: Why does private enterprise tend toward monopoly?

LEMAN: I'm not prepared to accept that there is a great tendency to monopoly.

However, society tells the businessman; "Be competitive. Try to beat the other fellow, try to gain market share." Obviously, as you gain market share, you increase concentration.

But there are lots of trained businessmen around and, if the big guy gets sloppy, he attracts a lot of other flies into the ointment. There are lots of examples of this process. In any event there are not many monopolies around except those run by governments.

WALKER: But who could break into the aluminum business! Enterprises like yours are so huge nobody can challenge you.

LEMAN: Sure they can. Just as we were able to break into the huge U.S. market against the Kaisers, the Alcoas, the Reynolds, all of which were much larger than Alcan in that market. In North America today there are thirteen aluminum producers. Before World War II there were only three.

In Canada, there are lots of well established, smallish, specialized companies, and they are often able to increase their scope at our expense.

The broader-based companies compete fiercely. If Alcan should get sloppy, Reynolds Aluminum would walk all over us. The consumer does not need to worry about that.

Aluminum also has competition from other materials.

WALKER: If there's so much competition, why has it been necessary to have anti-combines legislation?

LEMAN: An illegal combine aims to let existing companies preserve their position. To make an easy living, they stop competing with each other, then get sloppy and don't serve the public as well.

The law says that companies must compete. When one beats the others, it will get a dominant share of the market. That's why sheer size may simply indicate that one company did a far better job.

We should only be concerned about size when it leads to monopolistic practices. You can have a monopoly that refrains from monopolistic practices. And you can have a group of so-called competitors illegally indulging in a combine.

WALKER: What about enterprise within your corporation? If I started work here as a clerk, would I have to just sit quietly and wait for promotions? Or could I hustle and struggle and get ahead faster than the next person?

LEMAN: Promotion comes when an individual has proven, by hard work and intelligence and resourcefulness, that he or she should be promoted in preference to someone else. We encourage our employees to improve their qualifications and to be competitive among themselves.

People find there is terrific scope here. The Alcan group today has over 30 companies, most of which are bigger than the whole of Alcan was when I joined it. No one need feel stifled when he has the chance to be president of one of these subsidiaries.

WALKER: Would I feel any different working here than for a big government organization?

LEMAN: You would. The atmosphere is different. There's this care we take in evaluating performance, and in persuading people to try harder and compete. Then there's the discipline of the marketplace.

A lot of people who join government feel, "They'll keep me here as long as I want to stay." In Alcan, it's not like that. If you don't perform, you're encouraged to try elsewhere. Surely that reflects competition and the "spirit of free enterprise".

9 IN MEMORIAM

ELLISON — In loving memory of my husband, Bill, who passed away 5 years ago today.
A million times I've needed you
A million times I've cried,
If love could have saved you
You never would have died.
It broke my heart to lose you
But you did not go alone
For part of me went with you
The day God called you home.
—Sadly missed by your loving wife Emma.

GEORGESON — In loving memory of a dear sister Nellie who left us June 24, 1972.
"Not lost today, but everyday
In silence we remember."
—Fondly remembered and missed by Dorothy and Annie.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

Rain a Welcome Sign of Summer

The raindrops that fell on Victoria and some surrounding areas Sunday night were silver drops, even though no sunlight or full moon shone through them.

The silver drops ushered in the summer season officially and were welcomed by everyone concerned with living things — livestock, forests, wells, allotments, general farms, gardens, or plant nurseries.

Those with growing plants who had been watering well during the previous week or even had sprinklers running during the overcast period on Sunday, were able literally to "stretch the rain" to its greatest use.

Where it fell on damp soil it sank in. As the surface dries, the rain moisture remains below until used by the thirsty plant roots. If we keep up the watering regardless of overcast skies, we and the plants shall benefit.

Unfortunately the amount of rain here was too small to be of long lasting value, except as it may teach us how to stretch what may come later.

Where squash and cucumber plants are growing outdoors now and seem slow in developing, try putting a large clay pot or cardboard carton over each plant about seven in the evening.

Not only the trapped warmth will be beneficial but the artificial creation of a shorter day will hasten flowering. Both these plants (cucurbits) come originally from nearer the equator where daylight hours are shorter than in our northern latitude.

It is believed also that more female flowers develop to bear fruit when squash, cucumbers, marrows and related planst are growing in short days.

To substantiate this, you have probably noticed, and complained, that you don't get fruits forming until late August into September. By that time the longest days are over, daylight is shortened by two to three hours both morning and evening.

The idea is worth testing for we can do with summer squash while we have summer weather. The zucchini and crookneck varieties are fine summer vegetables, cooked or uncooked, and require no preparation other than detaching them from the plants.

Give each squash plant a good soaking at root level but not much over the leaves and none over the flowers when they come or you may spoil chances of pollination.

If you squash plants are still low, a wooden flat may fit over them for the nights but a square cardboard carton traps more warmth. The small hole at the join in the bottom of the carton admits enough air, as does the hole in the bottom of the clay pot.

Later as the plants grow, sacking or a dark colored material of some kind may be needed for greater height and spread.

Whatever is used, remove by about seven in the morning. That gives 12 hours daylight and 12 hours darkness.

When rain is probable, or it is falling, don't put on the cover for two reasons: one, you must avoid a close damp atmosphere which would encourage disease; second, you want the silver raindrops to reach the soil around your plants.

VESSEL CHARTER PRAWNS, 1975

The Pacific Biological Station, Fisheries and Marine Service, Department of the Environment, with funding from the Industrial Development Branch of Fisheries and Marine Service, Vancouver, and the Department of Recreation and Conservation, British Columbia Government, Victoria, will charter a vessel of not less than 50 feet for purposes of exploratory prawn fishing in central and north coastal inlets. The catch obtained from this fishing will not be sold.

The charter will commence early in September 1975 and will cover a period of 75 days.

The captain and crew of the vessel must be experienced in prawn fishing. The vessel will provide a minimum of 400 prawn traps with sufficient lines, buoys, etc. Space for a 23 cu. ft. chest freezer is required or freezing facilities in the hold. In addition to the captain and the crew, accommodation is required for 1 or 2 observers from the Fisheries Service.

Offer to charter forms may be obtained from the Purchasing Officer, Fisheries Service, Pacific Biological Station, Box 100, Nanaimo, B.C. Bids must be returned completed by July 15, 1975. Owners are advised before submitting bids to ascertain relevant regulations as to vessel certification, safety equipment, etc., from the Steamship Inspection Branch, Department of Transport.

Heritage Team Eyes Esquimalt

Thirty-three buildings in Esquimalt are worth preserving as heritage structures, the Victoria's Hallmark Society says.

In a brief presented to council this week the group urges the buildings be protected and restored for their historic value.

They include Admiral's House, at Dockyard (1895), Royal Naval Hospital buildings, also at Dockyard (1890), Captain Jacobson's house at 507 Head St. (1893), and the home of Vera Easton, 851 Wollaston, designed by Legislative Buildings architect F. M. Rattenbury.

The 10 dockyard and the Royal Naval Hospital buildings are still used.

"Too often buildings which have been preserved have become glass-encased fossils," the society said. "Heritage buildings . . . can remain revenue-producing. There are as many different uses for heritage buildings as there are different buildings."

Close to Success Rescue Bid Aborted

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — A plan to rescue three foreign students held hostage by Marxist African guerrillas for five weeks collapsed only minutes away from success when a Zaire government patrol boat fired on a fishing vessel attempting to pick up the hostages, witnesses said today.

They said the fishing vessel, which apparently had a huge ransom aboard, left the Tanzanian lake port of Kigoma Tuesday to pick up the three students on the Zaire side of Lake Tanganyika.

However, as the boat manoeuvered toward the Zaire shore where the three students were signaling with mirrors, a fast patrol boat of the Zaire government appeared and began lobbing shells in front of the fishing boat and towards the students, the witnesses said.

The sources said the father of one of the students watched the entire episode from a high bluff on the Tanzanian side of the lake and "was furious" when the rescue plan collapsed only minutes away from success.

Sources in Dar es Salaam said the fishing boat apparently carried a large ransom which was to be handed over to the rebels in exchange for the students' lives.

The guerrillas originally demanded a $500,000 ransom from the Tanzanian government, but it refused to pay. Since then the families of the students and other private individuals have been trying to raise the money.

The entire negotiations have been clouded in secrecy and it was unclear how Tuesday's unsuccessful exchange had been arranged. Sources in Dar es Salaam said both sides were now trying desperately to set up another rendezvous.

RAF Transports Alerted for Uganda

Times News Services

LONDON — In the face of worsening relationships between Britain and Uganda, the London Daily Mail reported today that four RAF transports have been put on round-the-clock alert to evacuate 700 British residents currently in the country.

A report from Kampala said that two British warships had arrived in Mombassa with troops to rescue a British lecturer sentenced to death by President Idi Amin.

But diplomats in London said the government has brought up to date contingency plans to remove the 700 Britons still living in the former colony in southeast Africa.

Officials in London said the British mission in Kampala had issued no special instructions to the Britons there, who include missionaries, teachers, doctors, businessmen and the families of some of them.

Another report from Kampala said Acting High Commissioner James Hennessey was warning them of possible dangers ahead.

Uganda Radio said Amin "doesn't care if all the British leave Uganda. Uganda is flourishing anyway and can develop faster without them."

The crisis is the result of a death sentence given to a teacher-lecturer Denis Hills, 61, for remarks about the Ugandan president and his regime in an unpublished manuscript. Hills referred to Amin as a "village tyrant."

Amin said he would spare Hills if British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan flew to Uganda to discuss political and economic relations between their two governments, but Callaghan said he would only go if Amin lifted the death sentence first.

Observers in London believe Amin manufactured the crisis and is keeping it going to get more economic aid from Britain.

Oak Bay Programs

A wide range of programs for people of all ages is again being offered at Oak Bay parks and recreation facilities.

These include a day camp for children from 9 to 14; tennis instruction for those 9 to 18 plus evening adult sessions; hiking for those 12 and over; plus the regular parks playground program for children 5 to 13.

Registrations are now taken from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. until Friday at Henderson Park Pavillion, 2291 Cedar Hill X Road.

Man Found Guilty

Jeffrey Glen Smythe of Duncan was found guilty in county court Tuesday of breaking and entering and theft at a house in Saanich last February.

Judge Montague Drake ordered a pre-sentence report and set sentencing for July 11.

ICBC Hikes Shop Rate to $18.50

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corp. of British Columbia has agreed to raise the hourly labor rate it pays to auto body shops to $18.50, effective July 1.

But spokesmen for most body shops in B.C. say they already are charging $20 or more, and say they're confident ICBC will pay them the higher rate.

ICBC spokesman Bev Penhall said the corporation has decided after "continuing and detailed study" to protect the gross profits of the shops by raising the labor rate from $15.50.

The hike is only theoretical at this stage, since most shops are doing repairs on a cash-only basis during the current strike of 1,800 office and technical workers.

But some shops may continue this cash policy after the strike ends, said Ken Smith, vice-chairman of the body shop division of the Automotive Retailers' Association.

In an interview, Smith said ICBC is bound by the Insurance Act to reimburse customers for charges above the minimum labor rate, as long as shops keep the charges at a competitive level.

He said the jump to the $20 rate was sparked by an April 1 hike in the hourly base rate for unionized shop workers in the lower mainland from $6.10 to $8.30.

Smith also suggested ICBC should change the date on which it grants annual labor rate increases from July 1 to April 1, when union wage boosts generally go into effect.

"ICBC's increase was needed in April and would have been accepted then," he said.

Penhall said any rate changes in 1976 will be made May 1, after the corporation has studied the effects of new labor contracts on the body shops.

In Victoria, ARA-affiliated shops raised their rates in May to $20, following a new union contract. Workers there are paid $8 per hour, up from $6.40.

In the Okanagan area, most shops are also charging $20 an hour for labor.

In Kamloops, where there is only one repair shop with unionized employees, the rate is still $15.50 per hour. ARA spokesman Brian Wallace said operators there are "living with the previous agreement with ICBC" and will do so until new rates come into effect.

On July 1, many Prince George area body shops will raise their labor rates to $21.

Ray Sagasky, president of the Northern Interior Association of Independent Body Shop Owners, said the higher rates are needed to meet increases in labor and material costs.

'FINAL OFFER' TO CLERKS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Food Industry Labor Relations Council, representing almost all major supermarkets, has made what it describes as a final wage offer to clerk-cashiers and general clerks.

The offer, retroactive to last April 21, is the first major development in retail food negotitations since talks broke down and mediation started two weeks ago.

It contains a proposed wage hike of $1.30-an-hour for both classifications of clerks, or 24.8 per cent for the clerk-cashiers and 21.8 per cent for the general clerks. Both percentages are higher than the record average settlements in B.C. for the first three months this year.

The clerks are seeking an annual income of $16,536. The offer would provide $13,600 for the clerk-cashiers and $15,000 a year for the general clerks.

Esquimalt Balks at Grant Of $340 to Open Space

Esquimalt council has refused to help finance Open Space this year after Ald. Ken Hill said the federal government dumped its funding responsibility in the municipalities' laps.

He said he could not approve expenditure of about $340 as Esquimalt's share of Open Space's intermunicipal budget.

"If you're going to spend money to get an organization on its feet you should be prepared to carry it through," said Hill.

Oak Bay and Victoria councils have agreed to contribute to the arts and entertainment centre for the second consecutive year, said centre director Bill Bartlett, but Saanich may not contribute.

Bartlett insisted Open Space was not started with federal funding, though it has received Local Initiatives Project and Canada Council money in its five years of operation.

One grant received last month for $9,000 was through Canada Council's visual arts program, he said.

Arbutus Recognizes School's Best

Grain Workers' Union Finds Home

VANCOUVER (CP) — Surrounded by criticism over frequent shutdowns of Vancouver grain-export terminals, the tiny Grain Workers Union, Local 33, has found a new home.

Tuesday night the 550-member union was to officially receive a charter as an affiliated local of the Canadian area of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Henry Kancs, secretary-treasurer of Local 333, has been negotiating the new affiliation for approximately a year since being cut adrift of the Brewery Workers' Union.

The grain workers' affiliation with the brewery workers ended when the international union merged into the teamsters' union in the United States.

But the teamsters were unable to convince most of the Canadian brewery workers to join their union and they formed their own Canadian organization.

The teamsters in Canada did not try to force the grain workers into their union and Local 333 was left to seek its new home under auspices of the parent Canadian Labor Congress.

Kancs said Tuesday the grain workers have affiliated with the longshoremen as an autonomous local.

"The most important thing is we will have one set of negotiations on grain instead of two", he said. "They (the longshoremen) have people working on grain as well.

"It is no good for the port of Vancouver to be disrupted too many times," he added in an interview, referring to the number of strikes and lockouts that have tied up shipments in the past several years.

"It will be better for this port as a whole."

Kancs said he realizes automation of terminal facilities and bulk loading plants for grain are the coming thing and "we can't stop it."

"We need the strength of the longshoremen's union so the companies don't take everything away from us," he said.

The grain workers have been employed during the last year under terms of a settlement report by federal conciliator, Dr. Neil Perry. The terms were legislated by parliament to end a shutdown which followed the refusal of grain-handling companies to accept the terms.

Since then closures affecting Canada's export commitments have occurred as a result of disputes involving government weighmen and samplers and, most recently, by another longshormen's strike. The longshoremen were ordered back by parliament and their contract dispute resolved through a government-appointed arbitrator, Mr. Justice Peter Seaton.

9 of 16 Gas Pumps Faulty

SEATTLE (AP) — Standard Oil of California has been charged with five counts of violating the city's weights and measures code by selling gasoline from inaccurate service station pumps.

The city's department of licenses and consumer affairs said an inspector rejected as unacceptably inaccurate nine of a "Chevron" station's 16 pumps during a routine examination June 10. Rejection notices were placed on the pumps and the station manager was told the pumps had to be corrected and re-examined before they could be used again.

The complaint, filed Monday, said the inspector saw five rejected pumps being operated the next day.

The city code requires that gasoline pumps not deviate from perfect accuracy by more than six-tenths of one per cent.

Chrysler Rebates To Nov. 30

DETROIT (UPI) — None of its automaking rivals plans to follow Chrysler's lead in the latest wrinkle in the rebate game — a maximum $300 discount deal on all but three hot selling models through Nov. 30.

Spokesman for General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and American Motors Corp. said Tuesday that their companies plan no further rebates at all.

The new Chrysler rebate program, announced Tuesday, is the most extensive of the various cashback deals offered buyers earlier this year when new car sales were at their lowest levels.

The announcement coincided with sales reports showing Chrysler new car sales in mid-June lagging 28 per cent behind the sales pace for the same period last year.

Over-all, latest auto industry sales figures show new cars are still trailing sales last year but are continuing to show gains on a month-to-month basis.

Industry spokesmen expressed hope that the worst is over, because for the fourth consecutive month, mid-June figures showed sales running ahead of preceding mid-month sales periods.

General Motors, the industry giant, said it sold 115,714 new cars during the mid-June period, down just over 12 per cent from the same period last year.

First Lands Given Back By Sept. 1

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

British Columbia Indians will get back by Sept. 1 the first 100 acres of 36,000 acres of cut-off lands they lost more than 50 years ago.

Return of the 100 acres of vacant Crown land and establishment of a three-member committee to work out a settlement of the cut-off lands issue was part of an agreement signed Tuesday by Indian representatives and the provincial government.

Human Resources Minister Norm Levi, who announced the agreement to the legislature, said the return of the 100 acres will be "a symbolic gesture of good faith" by the government.

The provincial government alone will decide which of the 23 bands seeking return of cut-off lands will get the 100 acres, he said.

For their part, members of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs cut-off lands committee agreed to halt blockades and demonstrations related to the cut-off issue.

The three-member cut-off lands committee to be set up will report to the government by Dec. 31, 1976 with recommendations on settlement of the cut-off land question.

Members of the committee will be one provincial government representative, one Indian representative, and one person chosen by both.

The committee is to recommend to both parties more specific terms of reference for itself.

The government agreed to act on the recommendations on or before June 24, 1977, two years from the signing of the agreement.

The agreement states that "interim discussions will proceed in an orderly fashion and that the public and the operation of government will not be inconvenienced by demonstrations, blockades, or any other such actions."

Levi's statement to the house followed a morning meeting and a short afternoon meeting between a cabinet committee and about 30 Indian representatives.

The agreement was hailed on all sides as an important breakthrough in the struggle of B.C. native people to get the return of or compensation for lost land.

"We're hopeful that the agreement reached today will set a precedent for the settlement of the general land claims issue," said Chief Adam Eneas of Penticton, spokesman for the Indians cut-off committeee.

The bands have been seek-

110 Die In Fiery Jet Crash

Times News Services

Fourteen survivors were in hospital.

Firemen said early today 108 bodies had been found in the marshy area at the edge of Kennedy International Airport where the Eastern Airlines non-stop flight from New Orleans crashed.

Two other persons died later in hospital.

A spokesman for the airline said there were 116 passengers and seven crew members, a total of 123 on the plane.

It was one of the worst airplane disasters in United States history.

George Van Epps, National Transportation Safety Board area supervisor, said there was no record of any emergency radio message from the pilot, Captain John Kleven of New York City.

Van Epps said flight and voice recorders had been recovered and were being sent to Washington for study.

Police, firemen and airport employees worked through the night to collect the remains of the victims. They stuffed fragments of bodies into bags and stored them in a yellow morgue tent to await identification.

SUPER WINNER

The winning ticket with the number QAQ45941 was drawn today from the revolving drum at the sweepstakes headquarters here. Remainder of the draw is expected by Thursday.

The Superprize will be increased to about $1 million for the next draw in October, it was announced today.

The cost of a ticket for the draw also is being doubled to the equivalent of $4.80 from the present $2.40.

HUGE HALIBUT

The fish, which dressed out at 324 pounds (with head and entrails removed) brought $302.29 to the crew of the long-liner Cape Devon.

It was caught June 2 during a three-week trip by the Cape Devon and was part of a 35,000-pound cargo landed at the Canadian Fishing Co. plant.

"That's the first time in my 20 years of fishing that I've caught one that big," said Louis Smith, skipper of the Cape Devon.

Victoria Shipyard Gets Two Ferries

The Burrard-Yarrows Group has won a $6.1 million provincial government contract to build two ferries in Victoria, it was announced today.

The passenger ferries, to run between Vancouver and North Vancouver, are expected to be completed by March 15, 1976.

Victoria was selected as the site for construction because of the capacity of the yard's aluminum constructural component, Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said.

Earlier, consideration was given to have one ferry built in the company's Vancouver yard and the other one here.

Burrard-Yarrows was the lowest of three bids at $6.1 million.

Higher bids for the ferries' construction were $6.8 million by Riv-Tow with completion date of March 15, and $6.3 million with completion date of Aug. 15, 1976 by Vancouver Shipyards.

Lorimer also indicated the program for the Burrard Inlet ferry transit service is on schedule and should be under way in early 1976.

Tenders will be called for the construction of the first stage shore installations in late July.

The contract will provide jobs for about 120 men, Victoria manager D. W. Challinor said today.

He said the Victoria shipyard is employing just under 800 men now but about 120 would have had to be laid off at the end of August without the new contract.

"This will provide continuity for our work force and we are delighted," he said.

6 Cent Hike Not 5 Looming for Gas

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Motorists face a six — possibly seven — cent a gallon increase in the price of gasoline in mid-August in addition to the 10 cent increase going into effect this week, the chief spokesman for B.C. service station operators said today.

R. B. Baldwin, secretary-manager of the Automotive Retailers Association, said the five cent increase announced by Finance Minister John Turner for mid-August is a wholesale price, not a retail price.

British Columbia service stations can be expected to raise their prices by at least six cents and in some cases seven to maintain their profit margin of 23 per cent.

"The association does not set prices but we are making a strong recommendation to service stations that they raise their prices by at least six cents, not five cents. Service stations can not make any money if they just keep passing along cost increases," Baldwin said.

Gasoline currently sells about 70.9 cents a gallon in Victoria, with five cents more for premium.

The increase at mid-August will push the prevailing Victoria price to 76.9 cents.

British Columbia oil companies today issued statements saying they had no control over pricing policies of service stations, except for those few that are directly run by the companies.

They were responding to charges that some service stations may have raised their gasoline prices 10 cents a gallon prematurely.

The 10-cent-a-gallon tax is paid by oil companies on all gas they sell starting at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday. Therefore the 10 cent price hike should go into effect only when service stations take delivery of new supplies of gasoline on which they pay the oil companies the 10 cent levy.

A spokesman for Shell Canada in Vancouver said it has pointed out the regulation to service stations lessees but has no control over their pricing policies.

By normal schedules, all service stations should have taken new deliveries before week's end and the 10 cent increase will be general by the weekend.

A. W. Torrell, B.C. corporate manager of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., said the vast majority of Gulf service stations increased their prices 10 cents a gallon Tuesday because of the terms of the contract with the lessee service stations.

Torrell said Gulf had to pay the additional 10 cents immediately on all gas sold through company-owned stations and also on gas sold on consignment by leasing dealers.

"The question of new deliveries becomes irrelevant in the vast majority of cases," he said.

The gasoline remains the property of Gulf in the vast majority of services stations so the tax became payable the instant the gasoline went out the hose on Tuesday.

Hotel Blaze Inquest Told of Drinking Bout

A 45-year-old man in whose room Saturday's fatal fire at the Royal Olympic Hotel started said Tuesday night he had spent most of Friday drinking in cocktail lounges. (See also Page 18.)

Walter Stanley told a coroner's jury he had come to the city for a weekend holiday from a catering job in Resolute Bay, N.W.T., and began drinking about 11 a.m.

He could not recall how many drinks he had but agreed with Victoria City police Sgt. Gordon Bennett that he must have spent more than $100 during the 11½-hour drinking bout before returning to his room.

Stanley was the principal witness at an inquest into the deaths of Elizabeth Mae Towers, 20, of Trail, Lorna Anne Minnis, 57, of Vancouver and Charles James McDonald, 90, a hotel resident, opened before a six-man jury and Coroner Edmond St. Jorre.

Stanley said he woke up early Saturday morning to find his bed in flames above his head. He said he was not "thinking properly" at the time and couldn't remember if he had been smoking on the way up to his room or later in bed.

"I'm not in the habit of smoking in bed," he testified.

He explained to the jury he had tried to put out the fire with tumblers of water and failing that tried to carry a flaming pillow the sink but it fell apart on the way. He said he went into the hallway and told a man about the fire, then returned to his room, put on his pants and ran downstairs to tell the desk clerk who advised him the fire department had been called.

Stanley said he watched the fire for a short time and then tried to get a room at the nearby Salvation Army hostel. It was full so he spent the remaining hours of the night at the Johnson Street bridge.

Pathologist Dr. Garth Walther testified that both McDonald and Mrs. Minnis died of smoke inhalation while Mrs. Towers died of extensive burns.

The coroner dispensed with the usual viewing of the body in the case of Mrs. Towers and adjourned the inquest to July 3.

POUND PLUNGE RECORD

LONDON (AP) — The pound sterling plunged to a record low on the world's money markets today after a government warning that the entire British economy is in peril.

After shedding two cents against the U.S. dollar Tuesday, the pound slipped still further to $2.2500 from its opening $2.2525.

The pound has fallen 26.8 per cent against the currencies of 10 major trading partners since December, 1971.

Today's slide followed a warning from Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey that Britons must make "real sacrifices all round for a short period" to survive their country's worst economic crisis since the Second World War.

In a television address Tuesday night, Healey slammed labor unions, which are demanding pay raises of up to 30 per cent, and urged them to abandon "this mad paper chase for idiots." Unless they moderate their demands, he said, "we are all sunk."

NEWS BRIEFS

Canadians Only

OTTAWA (CP) — The right of British subjects to vote in federal elections—a right that dates back to Confederation—will end at 12:01 a.m. Friday when subsection three of section 11 of the Elections Act, which says British subjects who otherwise qualify can vote with Canadian citizens, will come to an end.

Couple Slain

ST. JOHN'S, Antiqua (Reuter) — John Rowan Henry, leader of the opposition Antigua People's party, and his wife were stabbed to death with a cutlass in the grounds of their home here early Wednesday, police said. Their handyman, Charles Joseph, 44, is being held and police said he is expected to be charged with murder.

Motorcyclist Gets $90,000

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

A B.C. Supreme Court jury awarded a 27-year-old former logging welder $90,000 general damages Tuesday for an accident he suffered almost three years ago.

Daniel Waldemar Kallstrom of Cobble Hill was injured Sept 2, 1972, when his motorcycle was struck by a car driven by Garnet Samuel White near the Red Lion Motor Inn. His broken right leg still hasn't healed and is in a cast.

He told Mr. Justice Victor Dryer and the jury in his civil damages action that he still has to use crutches and in 1974 alone made 44 visits to hospital as an out-patient for physiotherapy.

He used to work as a welder at B.C. Forest Products Caycuse camp near Lake Cowichan but has been unable to work since the accident. He said his job is being held by the International Woodworkers of America union until he can return to work or until it is clear he cannot return.

He testified that he used to hunt, fish, swim, play baseball, softball and soccer and go horseback riding before the accident.

His lost wages while off

Too Early to Tell Effect on Hospital

The federal government's intention to trim financial aid for hospital construction may effect the B.C. Medical Centre in Vancouver but it is too soon to tell, a provinical spokesman said today.

Word of the cutback in health care spending, second such announcement in two days, came from Health Minister Marc Lalonde in Ottawa Monday night.

In a telegram to provincial health ministers, Lalonde said amounts allocated for hospital construction under the Health Resources Fund will be cut from $37 million to $24 million this fiscal year.

He also said the federal government will limit the number of foreign doctors immigrating to Canada unless a province requests that more be admitted to set up practice in that province.

Provincial Health Minister Dennis Cocke, on a tour of provincial hospitals, was not available for comment but Jim Mainguy, senior deputy health minister, said the implications of the new policy on B.C. have yet to be calculated.

The Health Resources Fund is used primarily to help fund construction of teaching facilities, said Mainguy, so any effect would likely be on the B.C. Medical Centre.

Lalonde's announcement and features of the Turner budget Monday are moves by Ottawa to counter rising costs in the health care field by cutting the share paid by the federal government.

CIDA Accused of Ignoring Women

By SHEILA BRADY
Special to the Times

MEXICO CITY — The Canadian International Development Agency's aid program has almost completely ignored women in its planning and implementation, states a research paper presented Tuesday at the International Women's Year tribune being held in Mexico City.

The research paper was written by eight women who have either worked with CIDA, CUSO or in Third World countries doing field work.

"It is our opinion that this oversight is a serious contributing factor to the many realistic and unsuccessful projects in our aid programs," states the conclusions of the four month task force.

The report urged the Canadian government and the Canadian delegates attending the United Nations International Women's Year conference to discuss with Third World countries constructive strategies which will enable women to develop lines of communication and co-operation for the success of future aid projects.

The task force study revealed that in 1973-1974 seven per cent of the projects in Non-Government Division of CIDA specifically mentioned women among the target groups of the aid programs.

And only 2.1 per cent of the CIDA NGO projected were aimed specifically at women during the same budget year.

The NGO branch is the smallest in CIDA. In 1975-1976 CIDA had an over-all budget of approximately $900 million, explained Hylda Bateman, liaison officer between the NGO branch and non-government organizations in Canada. Ms. Bateman is also in Mexico City as a representative on the Canadian delegation to the UN IWY two-week debate on the status of women.

Ms. Bateman said policies and the importance given to women in the NGO division are probably also similarly reflected in the multi-lateral and bi-lateral aid sections of CIDA.

"If anything, the NGO division is the trend setter in establishing new priorities when setting up requirements for loans and project priorities, she said during an interview Tuesday.

"This issue of funding training programs for men or women has not come up before," she said. "But I expect, because of the UN conference and the world plan of action, senior management will examine the programs again," Ms. Bateman added.

CIDA was in the middle of preparing a position paper for the UN conference but due to a lack of time, and no official approval from CIDA's president Paul Gerin-Lajoie, the paper will only be presented as a declaration of intent.

SYMPHONY MEETING SWITCHED

The annual general meeting of the Victoria Symphony Society will be held in the auditorium of the Oak Bay junior secondary school Thursday at 8 p.m., not in Monterey School as previously announced.

A symphony spokesman said the change in locations was recommended by the Oak Bay fire marshal.

The agenda for the meeting at the school, 2101 Cadboro Bay Road, includes election of directors and annual reports.

Both the nominating committee of the symphony society and the petitioners' committee, a group within the society which has opposed some decisions made by the board of directors, have nominated full slates of candidates to fill the 16 vacancies on the board of directors.

The chairman of the board of directors is not directly elected by the membership to that position, but is chosen by the new board of directors from among its members.

Will the Never on Sunday Aldermen Please Stand Up!

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Never on Sunday — or any other day, apparently — will Mayor Peter Pollen get a clear answer from his city council colleagues on their individual opinions as to the desirability or otherwise of Sunday trading.

The exasperated mayor tried repeatedly to obtain such a statement from the eight aldermen at Tuesday's caucus meeting. But he failed spectacularly, despite issuing a challenge to "show the political courage and guts to stand up individually and say it is or it isn't desirable."

All Pollen received by way of an answer was that council should not impose any bylaw restrictions on Sunday commercial activity.

. . . exasperated

That was the recommendation of a special sub-committee — Ald. Malcolm Anderson, Ald. Bob Ellis and Ald. Bill Tindall — which Pollen appointed about two months ago to look into the question.

When the two-page report of the committee came up for discussion Tuesday, Pollen noted that it was "brief to the point of being virtually useless."

Its chief failing, he said, was the lack of any specific recommendation on defining council's position.

"Either we are going to have an open Sunday, or a closed Sunday — with modifications allowing drug stores, Mom and Pop stores and so on to remain open."

Ald. Mike Young also wanted to know how the sub-committee members felt individually about the "open Sunday" question.

When Anderson, who headed the committee, merely repeated that its recommendation was for no controls, Pollen snapped: "Don't equivocate. Either you do or you don't."

Tindall, arguing that the status quo should remain, said if the city decided to legislate against Sunday trading in general it would have the difficult task of deciding which specific exemptions should be allowed.

That matter had already highly controversial in Ontario, he noted.

Ellis commented: "In my opinion this situation should be regulated by the market place."

"The Los Angeles approach, in other words," retorted the mayor.

Ald. Clyde Savage agreed with Tindall that no partial policy could be adopted; either council should impose a total ban or permit unrestricted opening.

Discussion finally petered out with a recommendation from Ald. Sam Bawlf that "the recommendation of the committee on roller skates be accepted by council and the committee be disbanded."

Added Young: "The question is whether the discharge should be honorable or dishonorable."

Three PSACs Fined In Walkout Aftermath

Three Victoria members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada were fined $50 in Victoria provincial court today after pleading guilty to unlawfully participating in a strike Dec. 19, 1974.

The three, Simon Grypma, Patrick Heffernan and Clarence Rose, all employees of Environment Canada's Victoria operation, were among 19 PSAC members charged today under the Public Service Staff Relations Act.

The other 16 PSAC members were remanded to July 16 or 17 for plea.

DALZIEL
. . . "bloody rotten"

In all, 55 Victoria union member have received summonses on the charge of unlawfully participating in a strike and the remaining members will be charged in provincial court Thursday and Friday.

A total of about 800 PSAC members across Canada will face prosecution under similar charges.

Prosecutor Cecil Branson told the court that after the one-day walkout, employees of Environment Canada were asked by letter to produce a doctor's certificate verifying whether they had been sick for that day.

Branson said a letter was sent back to the management by the PSAC members at the environmental station, including the three who were fined today, saying they had not been sick but had been participating in a union study session.

Defence lawyer Alan Patterson asked Judge Douglas Campbell to levy a similar sentence as those given to federal air controllers in New Brunswick who had been charged earlier with the same offence. Patterson said the air controllers had been granted a conditional discharge, the condition being a $10 fine.

Campbell commented on the "responsive attitude" of those at the environmental station who had signed the letter to management, but said he did not agree with a conditioinal discharge and levied a $50 fine in each case.

Outside court, PSAC regional representative Tom Dalzell indicated that many of those facing similar charges will plead not guilty.

"We're certainly going to fight it," Dalzell said.

He said he was disappointed in the sentences levied in court today and felt that the three who pleaded guilty should have been given the same sentence as the New Brunswick air controllers.

"Here we're fined $50 and get a record with it which is bloody rotten. On top of that they lose a day's pay," for appearing in court."

Museum Move Miffs Mayor

City aldermen received a mild rebuke from Mayor Peter Pollen on Tuesday, for announcing during his absence on holiday that the Bastion Square Courthouse—home of the Maritime Museum—will be put up for sale or lease.

"I rather think it is a most unfortunate course of action. I am very strongly opposed to it," Pollen told council's weekly caucus meeting.

Pollen said he didn't think the city should apply any more pressure to the Maritime Museum to vacate the premises, until some long-term plan can be worked out with the provincial government.

Ald. Alf Hood, acting mayor during Pollen's vacation in Europe, was obviously taken aback and angered by the comments, which he said represented "a complete switch" in attitude.

"For months we've been hearing how useless this thing is . . . we seem to be going around in circles," he complained.

Ald. Sam Bawlf said it was not a case of applying "pressure" to the museum, but of determining the most appropriate use for a valuable piece of city-owned property.

Council took no action on reversing its earlier decision to advertise the property and await proposals.

Ask The Times

Q. I was intrigued to read in your paper that Saanich is going to try and make compost out of the weeds in Elk Lake and had trouble keeping them from spreading, even after they'd been cut. Is it because the weeds are a worse type than those in other Lakes? S.K.

A. Not really. Probably warm weather and algae, fed on sewage in the lake, contribute to the problem. As a matter of record, the worst water weeds for spreading were found on Kariba Lake in Africa in 1959. In a period of 11 months the mat-forming weed had choked an area of 77 square miles. By 1963 this had risen to 387 square miles.

City Proved Right In Eatery Dispute

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall admitted in the legislature Tuesday that the provincial government has no legal right to develop the Causeway Esso gas station site as a sandwich bar, or in any other way. (See page 3.)

In response to a question from Liberal leader David Anderson, Hall agreed that title to the property is held not by the government itself but by the provincially-funded beautification agency, the Capital Improvement District Commission.

The statement confirmed what city council members have been claiming for the past two weeks.

And it has been construed by aldermen as implying that the government will drop its proposal for a sandwich bar and arts and crafts boutique on the site. The city feels such development would be quite inappropriate on that location.

As part of its over-all plan for Inner Harbor improvement, Victoria purchased the property from Imperial Esso under an agreement for sale in March, 1974, with a down payment of $11,265.

Five months later the city assigned its rights as purchaser to the CIDC for the same amount, leaving the agency the right to acquire clear title on paying the balance of $221,485.

What actually happened, according to city information, is that the provincial government paid over the balance to Imperial Oil and acquired title. But this was subject to the agreement for sale in favor of CIDC, which is still registered against the title.

Therefore once CIDC hands over the $221,485 to the province it is entitled to obtain transfer of title — but from the province rather than from Imperial Oil.

Revenge? He's Never Heard of It

But you know, it's a nice change to meet someone like Alex Hutcheson.

For Alex isn't against the world. He's with it. Though it may seem sometimes that the world is against him, he doesn't mind. He puts things back together again. And he doesn't want revenge.

Unless you are a relative newcomer to Victoria, you probably already know of Alex Hutcheson, the genial owner of the Texaco service station Hutcheson Motors Ltd. at 1669 Fort Street. If you do then you probably know him better as either "Hutch" or "grandpa" for he's not one to stand on formalities.

And in case you didn't read the pages of this newspaper about 10 days ago, Hutch's place was "hit" by three teenagers from south of the border who made off without paying for a transmission repair bill, filled up their gas tank on the house and pocketed a few hundred dollars from the till.

Police picked up three suspects about two hours later but what was Hutch's response? Forget it. That's what he said. And he means it.

It's not that he condones that sort of thing. But he wouldn't lay charges against the youths because, he says, they have their whole lives ahead of them.

"Charging them would only start the kids on a record and that's not fair," he explains. "They'll probably never do anything wrong in their lives again."

Alex Hutcheson . . . he knows kids

Sounds a bit idealistic but it's not the first time that Hutch has let youngsters off the hook.

He's the dedicated type of community citizen who often stops to pick up piles of garbage when he sees them lying in the streets and carts them off in his car "just to help keep our little town nice and clean." And he is very proud of the appearance of his service station.

He'll show you the toilets, where the walls are lined with clean tiles and vases of flowers stand next to Kleenex boxes near the washbasins. And for the men there are bottles of aftershave lotion.

"We try a little harder," he says with a grin.

But someone has been trying even a little harder to desecrate what Hutch refers to as his "mini Butchart Gardens." Three times he has got the strip along the roadside sparkling with trees, shrubs, neatly-cut lawn and flowers. And three times vandals have left branches broken, flowerpot urns overturned and the place generally in a shambles.

Alex just shrugs and says "we generally manage to get things back in order." He's done it again, too. It's all back together again.

"Sometimes you do feel sort of 'why should I?'" he confesses. "But afterwards you think about it and you go back and put things together again and it's all right."

Alex Hutcheson has a long history of doing things for kids.

It goes way back to the time when he worked for the long-gone Jameson Motors Ltd. on Broughton Street.

"They let me use the top floor and I got old dolls and toys and repaired them and took them to poor kids for Christmas," Alex explains.

Helped by Doug Knight and Hope Sylvester, he got the names of all the poor families in Victoria "and we made sure everyone got a wrapped gift, an apple and an orange and some candy."

"Old Bob Jameson (who died some time ago) was a fair-minded man and a great teacher for me," says Hutch. "He was one of the finest men who ever lived in Victoria. I've got his picture hanging in my office now.

"It was in those days of playing Santa Claus that I met my wife Jean," says Alex. "She and her mother and some friends used to make the dresses for the dolls we repaired."

His wife, who died a year and-a-half ago, was fond of children and in her memory he has put in a little playground for the patients of the children's ward at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Alex has two children — Alexander Paul Hutcheson and Mrs. Susan Edwards — and three grandchildren, all living in Victoria.

"I think we're very quickly running out of lots of things . . . the important part of life," he says. "The whole outlook in life has become callous; people think only of themselves and they couldn't care less about anyone else.

max low

"These lads were up from the United States on holiday. They were 17 years old. I think everyone should be given a fair chance. And I think we should always try to nip something like that in the bud before it gets into their system.

"I don't think it's up to me to say 'hey you stole something and you must pay for it.' One of the lads came to me and said 'sorry' and returned $100, which is all he had left."

Hutch admits he was still about $280 out of pocket but adds quickly:

"But that's beside the point."

Doctor Fights Gorge Hospital

A former Victoria doctor claims he was "wrongfully dismissed from Gorge Road Hospital in an action which began in B.C. Supreme Court here this morning.

David Charles Arnott, 60, a medical doctor who was hired as medical co-ordinator at the hospital in September, 1969, claims the hospital breached its contract with him in June, 1973.

He contends the hospital "unilaterally" changed the terms of his employment creating conditions which were "unreasonable and impossible" for him to accept.

He was "thereby effectively and improperly dismissed from his employment," Arnott's lawyer, Donald Farquhar maintained in a statement of claim.

Arnott seeks general damages for what he alleges the hospital's failure to give reasonable notice of the changes in his term of employment. He seeks, as well, special damages of $10,185.20.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer appeared puzzled by Arnott's request for special damages which are being sought to cover the costs the doctor incurred in finding new employment, but agreed to hear the argument.

The case is expected to last three days, ending Friday.

The hospital, represented by lawyer Ken Murphy, denies Arnott was dismissed and adds Arnott terminated his employment himself without giving notice.

In the statement of claim Farquhar noted Arnott, a specialist in physical medicine and rehabilitation, was hired originally to hold four half-day sessions a week at $60 a day. The salary, he said, was set out in the B.C. Medical Association schedule of minimum fees.

However on Jan. 1, 1973, Arnott's duties were expanded to include conducting teaching clinics five times a year, overseeing the physical medicine department, and acting as screening physician and presiding chairman of the patient assessment committee.

The statement alleged Arnott's pay was accordingly increased in conformity to the BCMA schedule then in effect but three months later it was reduced.

9 IN MEMORIAM

ELLISON — In loving memory of my husband, Bill, who passed away 5 years ago today.
A million times I've needed you
A million times I've cried,
If love could have saved you
You never would have died.
In life I watched your heart to lose you
But you did not go alone
For part of me went with you
The day God called you home.
—Sadly missed by your loving wife Emma.

GEORGESON — In loving memory of a dear sister Nellie who left us June 24, 1972.
"Not just today, but everyday
In silence we remember."
—Fondly remembered and missed by Dorothy and Annie.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

Special School Plans Pass

Preliminary drawings for a school for the trainable mentally retarded have been approved by Saanich school board.

Drawings were prepared by architect Don Marshall, who was also appointed architect for the new 600-student high school to be built at Stelly's Cross Road and Wallace.

Marshall designed Parkland high school in Sidney.

The school for the retarded will be built next to Keating elementary school on Central Saanich Road.

The 3,000-square foot building, which includes two classrooms, washrooms, an activity rooms and kitchens, is expected to cost about $150,000. Also built will be a 1,000-square foot covered play area.

School board vice-chairman Lois Walsh said Tuesday retarded children from Saanich district have been going to Dogwood school in Sooke School District, but Dogwood is becoming crowded so Saanich district must provide its own facility.

About 25 children are expected to attend the new school, which should be finished by early 1976, a district official said.

Stelly's Cross Road high school will cost about $2.5 million, and target date for completion is September 1977.

The board plans to have the new high school, along with Parkland and Claremont, as the three Grade 9 through 12 schools in the district.

Parkland already has Grades 9 to 12.

Claremont has Grades 11 and 12, but in September Grade 10 students from Royal Oak junior high school will move to Claremont, and there will be five portable classrooms at the school to handle them.

Royal Oak elementary and junior high schools will combine in September into one school with kindergarten to Grade 9.

Grade 7 students from surrounding elementary schools — Lochside, Beaver Lake, and Cordova Bay — will now attend Royal Oak.

Mt. Newton junior high school will remain as it is (Grades 8-10) until the new Stelly's Cross Road school is built, when Mt. Newton will become a middle school with Grades 6-8.

TORONTO TEACHERS SETTLE FOR 40%

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto's 10,148 elementary teachers will receive a 40-per-cent wage increase plus a cost-of-living allowance under a two-year tentative agreement.

The increase will raise the average annual salary to $17,415 from $12,446 by June, 1977.

Spokesmen for the teachers, employed by Metro's six area public school boards, said detailed presentation of the proposed agreement to the teachers for ratification probably will be delayed until the fall because of some outstanding contract items. Neither side would say what the outstanding items were.

William Ross, board negotiator, said the number of Metro elementary teachers also will increase by 700 over the life of the proposed contract to enable classes to be reduced to an average of 25 pupils from 27.

Principals, who now receive an average annual wage of $22,150, will get $29,049 by the end of the contract, and vice-principals, now paid $18,850, will get $24,931.

Negotiations with Metro's 8,300 secondary school teachers are continuing.
